Complaint of Landlord Against Tenant.

36903.

To Lewis I. O'Neal, justice of the peace for the District of Columbia:

Your complainant, Eastern Trust and Banking Company, a corporation duly established under a charter granted by the State of Maine, respectfully represents that it is entitled to the possession of the lands, tenements, and premises lying opposite to square two hundred and seventy (270), in the city of Washington, in the District of Columbia, described by metes and bounds as follows, to wit: Commencing for the same at the southeast corner of said square two hundred and seventy (270), thence southerly with the west line of Thirteenth street to the channel of the Potomac river;
2 thence westerly with the said channel to a point opposite the southwest corner of said square; thence due north to the southwest corner of said square, following the eastern line of what is alleged to be Thirteen-and-a-half street; thence with the southern line of said square two hundred and fifty-five (255) feet and one (1) inch to the place of beginning, together with the improvements thereon and the rights and privileges thereto appertaining, and that the same are detained from it and held without right by one Edward

M. Willis, of the District of Columbia, who became and was tenant by sufferance of the undersigned of said lands, tenements, and premises, and whose said tenancy and estate therein has been determined by the service of a thirty days' notice to quit on said Willis. Complainant therefore prays that a summons may be issued to a proper officer of said District, to be served upon said tenant by sufferance, holding over as aforesaid, commanding said tenant to appear before you on a day to be therein named, to show cause why judgment in favor of your complainant for the possession of said lands, tenements, and premises and costs accruing upon this application should not be rendered herein, agreeably to the act of Congress in such cases made and provided.

DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA, } To wit:
County of Washington, }

Before Lewis I. O'Neal, a justice of the peace in and for the District of Columbia, this 27th day of September, A. D. 1894.

EASTERN TRUST & BANKING CO., Plaintiff,
vs.
EDWARD M. WILLIS, Defendant. } No. 15280, 36903.

Plea.

Now comes the defendant in his proper person and, denying that he held the premises as in the written complaint of plaintiff alleged, says that the title to the said premises is in Wm. G. Johnson, under whom defendant claims the said premises, and that the said title hereby claimed is not derived from any letting of the premises by the plaintiff (or by those under whom the plaintiff claims), and is not derived from any forcible entry or forcible detainer.

EDWARD M. WILLIS, Defendant.

3 Subscribed and sworn to before me this 27th day of September, A. D. 1894.

LEWIS I. O'NEAL, J. P. [SEAL.]

NOTE.—If the title is in the defendant, he will so state. If it be in another, under whom the defendant claims, he must name that other and say "that the title is in —— ——, under whom he claims the said premises."

Rule Supreme Court District of Columbia Prescribing Above Form of Plea. 2d M. G. T., p. 559.

RULE.—"In any and every proceeding instituted before a justice of the peace under and by virtue of section 684, chapter XIX, of the Revised Statutes of the United States relating to the District of Columbia, if upon the trial the defendant, in order to avail himself of the provisions of section 687 of the Revised Statutes, wishes to plead title to the premises in himself or in another person under whom he claims the premises, the justice of the peace shall require the plea to be in writing and to be sworn to by the defendant. The plea shall be in the following (as given above) or equivalent form."

Any plea of the title not made as above required the justice shall treat as a nullity. Unless the plea of title be made as by this rule required, the proceedings before the justice shall not be suspended, but the justice shall go on with the trial and render judgment in the matter as the right of the case may require. Upon a plea of title being made by the defendant in conformity with this rule and upon the proceedings being certified to this court by the justice, the cause shall be docketed by the clerk and placed on the trial calendar in the same manner and subject to the same rules as appeals from a justice of the peace. The plaintiff shall, during the term of the circuit court occur-ing next after the pleading of title before the justice, file in said court a declaration making demand for the possession of the premises, and with a description thereof as in ejectment, and serve the defendant with a copy thereof. In any such declaration a general demand shall be sufficient to warrant an assessment of damages and intervening rent, as provided in section 690 of said Revised Statutes.

EASTERN TRUST AND BANKING COMPANY, Plaintiff,
vs.
EDWARD M. WILLIS, Defendant.
} At Law. No. 36903.

4 The plaintiff sues the defendant to recover the following-described property, situated in the District of Columbia, to wit: All those certain lands, tenement-, and premises lying opposite to square number two hundred and seventy (270), in the city of Washington, in the District of Columbia, described by metes and bounds as follows, to wit: Commencing for the same at the southeast corner of said square two hundred and seventy, thence southerly with the west line of Thirteenth street to the channel of the Potomac river; thence westerly with the said channel to a point opposite the southwest corner of said square; thence due north to the southwest corner of said square, following the eastern line of what is alleged to be Thirteen-and-a-half street; thence with the southern line of said square two hundred and fifty-five (255) feet and one (1) inch to the place of beginning, together with the improvements thereon and the rights and privileges thereto appertaining, in which plaintiff claims a fee-simple, and of which the plaintiff was lawfully possessed on the first day of January, 1894, when the defendant entered the same and unlawfully ejected the plaintiff therefrom and unlawfully detains the same from the plaintiff; and the plaintiff made due demand upon the defendant for the possession of said real estate and premises and does hereby renew such demand, which the defendant refused and still refuses to give, and the plaintiff claims the possession thereof, with the appurtenances, besides the cost of this suit.

EASTERN TRUST AND BANKING COMPANY vs. EDWARD M. WILLIS. } At Law. No. 36903.

SAME vs. WILLIAM G. JOHNSON. } At Law. No. 36904.

The plaintiff and defendants in the above-entitled causes hereby mutually agree that the said causes may be tried together, and that the material facts in the said causes are as follows, to wit:

5 The plaintiff is a body corporate, organized and doing business under and by virtue of a special charter granted by the legislature of the State of Maine, and having its principal place of business in the city of Bangor, in said State.

An exemplified copy of said charter is filed herewith, marked "E. T. and B. Co., Exhibit No. 1," and is to be read and considered in connection herewith and as part hereof. The defendant William G. Johnson is sued as assignee of the American Ice Company, as hereinafter set out, and the defendant Edward M. Willis as the tenant or lessee of the said Johnson. The American Ice Company is a body corporate duly organized under the laws of the State of Maine and had, until the 14th day of October, 1893, its principal place of business at the said city of Bangor, in said State, since which time it has had no office.

That heretofore, to wit, on the second day of December, A. D. 1889, the said American Ice Company executed and delivered to the said trust company a certain deed, which was recorded in Liber No. 1439, folio 417 et seq., one of the land records of said District, and a regularly certified copy of said deed as recorded is filed with this statement of fact, marked "E. T. and B. Co., Exhibit No. 2," and is made a part hereof as fully as though incorporated herein in hæc verba. The original deed bears the impress of the corporate seal of the American Ice Company and of the Eastern Trust and Banking Company upon or near the names of said companies subscribed to said deed, and it is admitted that said seals were affixed to said deed at the time of or before the execution and delivery thereof and as required by the witnessing clause thereto, and that the recorder failed to note the same upon the record.

The bonds described in said deed were executed and delivered unto the said Eastern Trust and Banking Company, as recited in said deed, and were by the said Eastern Trust and Banking Company delivered to the parties entitled thereto, as required by the terms and provisions of said deed. That said bonds were taken by the parties to whom they were delivered for value in the regular course of business, before maturity, and are now held and owned by them or by their assigns or legal representatives, except as to the first instalment thereof, which fell due in December, A. D. 1892, and was paid, together with the interest then accrued and due on all of said bonds. The next instalment of said bonded indebtedness, which became due in December, 1893, was not paid at maturity nor was the interest then falling due paid, nor have either of said sums or any part of them been since paid or satisfied in any manner. The parties holding said bonds have not nor have any of them waived their right to said payment in accordance with the tenor and effect of said bonds and of said deed of trust or mortgage. By the terms and provisions of said bonds and of the said deed of trust or mortgage the residue of said bonded indebtedness, to wit, the sum of $35,000, together with the accrued interest thereon, are now and were at the time of the commencement of this suit due and payable.

Thereafter, to wit, on or about the 13th day of October, 6 A. D. 1893, the said American Ice Company, by an instrument of writing of that date, made and delivered in due form of law an assignment of all of its property of what kind soever for the benefit of its creditors unto the defendant William G. Johnson, which said deed of assignment was duly made of record in Book No. 1847, page 211 et seq., one of the land records of said District, a duly certified copy of which is filed with this statement of fact, marked "E. T. and B. Co., Exhibit No. 3," and is to be read and considered in connection herewith and as part hereof so far as it may be material

The said Johnson accepted said trust and entered upon the discharge thereof, in the course of which he, as such assignee, leased the hereinbefore-described real estate unto the defendant, Edward M. Willis. A copy of said lease is filed herewith, marked "E. T. and B. Co., Exhibit No. 4," and is to be read and considered in connection herewith and as part hereof.

After the default in the payment of said second instalment of bonds and of the interest on the bonded indebtedness, as aforesaid, had continued for the period of more than ninety days the said bondholders, or those holding more than fifty per cent. of the total face value thereof, directed the said trustee to proceed in the execution of said trust in accordance with the terms and provisions thereof, in pursuance of which the said trustee has instituted these proceedings to obtain possession of said property.

The said trustee caused a thirty days' notice to quit to be served upon each of said defendants. The notice to William G. Johnson was in the language following, to wit:

"SIR: You are hereby notified to remove from and quit the land and premises situate in the city of Washington, in the District of Columbia, described as follows, viz: All that piece or parcel of land opposite square two hundred and seventy (270), commencing for the same at the southeast corner of said square two hundred and seventy (270), thence southerly with the west line of Thirteenth street to the channel of the Potomac river; thence westerly with the said channel to a point opposite the southwest corner of said square; thence due north to the southwest corner of said square, following the eastern line of what is alleged to be Thirteen-and-a-half street; thence with the southern line of said square two hundred and fifty-five (255) feet one (1) inch to the place of beginning, together with the improvements thereon and the rights and privileges thereunto appertaining, which you now occupy as tenant by sufferance of the undersigned, in your capacity as assignee as aforesaid, at the end of thirty (30) days from the time of the serving of this notice upon you.

(Signed) EASTERN TRUST AND BANKING COMPANY,
A Corporation Duly Established under a Charter Granted by the State of Maine,
By B. F. LEIGHTON, Its Attorney.

7 The notice addressed to Edward M. Willis is the same in every particular except that the words "in your capacity as assignee as aforesaid" are omitted.

Copies of said notices are filed herewith, marked "E. T. and B. Co., Exhibits Nos. 5 and 6," and the same are to be read and considered as a part hereof. The said notices were duly served upon the defendants on the 30th day of July, A. D. 1894. Thereafter, to wit, on the 17th day of September, 1894, the plaintiffs caused a seven days' summons to be issued by Lewis I. O'Neal, a justice of the peace in and for said District, in accordance with the provisions of the statute in such cases made and provided; and the defendants appeared therein and interposed pleas of title, the defendant Johnson pleading title in himself and the defendant Willis in the said Johnson, whereupon security was given as required by law and the causes were duly certified by the justice to this court for trial, as will appear by the pleadings and proceedings had and taken in said causes.

It is further admitted that after default had been made in the payment of said bonds and the interest thereon, as hereinafter stated, and in pursuance of the direction of the holders of said bonds as aforesaid and of the powers conferred upon and vested in it by said deed of trust or mortgage, the said trustee advertised said property for sale in accordance with the requirements of said deed of trust and exposed the same for sale at public auction in the said city of Bangor, State of Maine, on or about the 4th day of May, A. D. 1894. No sale took place at that time, but the sale was adjourned until September 8th, A. D. 1894, at the same place, at which sale a committee, acting for said bondholders, purchased the above-described real estate for their, the said bondholders', benefit.

The terms of said sale have not yet been complied with and no deed has been made to said purchasers, it being understood and agreed upon between the purchaser and the trustee at the time of said last-named sale that the said trustee should first obtain possession of said property.

Upon the pleadings and proceedings in said causes and the facts hereinbefore stated and admitted, it is by the respective parties to said causes stipulated and agreed that the same shall be, and they hereby are, submitted to the honorable justice holding this court for his determination without a jury, judgment to be rendered by him as to law and justice shall appertain, the right of excepting to the materiality or relevancy or competency of the facts above stated or any of them being reserved, as also the right of appeal.

In witness whereof the said plaintiff and defendant- have, by their respective attorneys, signed this agreement.

B. F. LEIGHTON,
Attorney for Plaintiff.
W. G. JOHNSON,
Attorney for Defendants.

8 E. T. & B. Co., Exhibit No. 1.

Filed November 17, 1894.

State of Maine.

In the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and eighty-seven.

An act to incorporate the Eastern Trust and Banking Company.

Be it enacted by the senate and house of representatives in legislature assembled, as follows:

Section 1. Weston F. Milliken, Thomas J. Stewart, Fred. W. Hill, John Cassidy, David Bugbee, Eugene M. Hersey, John H. Dole, Sprague Adams, James Adams, Josiah C. Towle, William B. Dole, J. Albert Dole, William B. Snow, Julius Waterman, Charles E. Field, Eugene C. Nichols, Frank P. Wood, Jacob Sterns, George H. Grant, Ivory W. Coombs, John Ross, John McCann, Cornelius Murphy, David T. Sanders and Francis H. Clergue, or such of them as may by vote accept this charter, with their associates, successors and assigns, are hereby made a body corporate and politic, to be known as Eastern Trust and Banking Company and as such shall be possessed of all the powers, privileges and immunities, and subject to all the duties and obligations conferred on corporations by law, except as otherwise provided herein.

Section 2. The corporation hereby created shall be located at Bangor, Penobscot county, Maine, and may establish agencies in any part of this State.

Section 3. The purposes of said corporation and the business which it may perform, are; first, to receive on deposit, money, coin, bank notes, evidences of debt, accounts of individuals, companies, corporations, municipalities and States, allowing interest thereon, if agreed, or as the by-laws of said corporation may provide; second to borrow money, to loan money on credits or real estate or personal security, and to negotiate loans and sales for others; to guarantee the payment of the principal and interest of all obligations secured by mortgages of real estate running to said Eastern Trust and Banking Company; to issue its own bonds or obligations based upon real or personal property conveyed to it, in trust to secure the payment of such bonds or obligations and the interest thereon; third, to hold for safe keeping, all kinds of personal or mixed property, and to act as agent for the owners thereof, and of real estate for the collection of income on the same, and for sale of same, and to act as agent for issuing, registering and countersigning certificates, bonds, stocks and all evidences of debt or ownership in property; fourth, to hold by grant, assignment, transfer, devise or bequest, any real or personal property, or trusts duly created, and to execute trusts of every description; fifth, to act as assignee, receiver, guardian, executor and administrator, and no surety shall be 9 necessary upon the bond of the corporation unless the court or officer approving such bond shall require it; sixth, to hold and enjoy all such estates, real, personal and mixed, as may be obtained by the investment of its capital stock or any other moneys and funds that may come into its possession in the course of its business and dealings, and the same sell, grant, mortgage and dispose of, except as provided in section ten; seventh, to do in general, all the business that may lawfully be done by a trust or banking company.

SECTION 4. An administrator, assignee, guardian or trustee, any court of law or equity, including courts of probate and insolvency, officers and treasurers of towns, cities, counties and savings banks of the State of Maine, may deposit any moneys, bonds, stocks, evidences of debt or of ownership in property, or any personal property, with said corporation, and any of said courts may direct any person deriving authority from them, to so deposit the same.

SECTION 5. The capital stock of said corporation shall be one hundred thousand dollars, divided into shares of one hundred dollars each, with the right to increase said capital at any time, by vote of the shareholders, to any amount not exceeding one million of dollars. Said corporation shall not commence business until stock to the amount of one hundred thousand dollars shall have been subscribed for and paid in.

SECTION 6. The shareholders of this corporation shall be individually responsible, equally and ratably, and not one for the other, for all contracts, debts and engagements of said corporation to a sum equal to the amount of the par value of the shares owned by each, in addition to the amount invested in said shares.

SECTION 7. Said corporation, after beginning to receive deposits, shall at all times have on hand in lawful money, as a reserve, not less than twenty-five per cent. of the agregate amount of its deposits, which are subject to withdrawal on demand; provided, that in lieu of lawful money, two-thirds of said twenty-five per cent. may consist of balances payable on demand, due from any national or State bank.

SECTION 8. The shares of said corporation shall be subject to taxation in the same manner and amount, as are the shares of national banks.

SECTION 9. Said corporation shall be subject to examination by the bank examiner, who shall visit it at least once in every year, and as much oftener as he may deem expedient. At such visits, he shall have free access to its vaults, books and papers, and shall thoroughly inspect and examine all the affairs of said corporation, and make such inquiries as may be necessary to ascertain its condition and ability to fulfill all its engagements. He shall preserve, in a permanent form, a full record of his proceedings, including a statement of the condition of said corporation. A copy of such statement shall be published by said corporation immediately after the annual examination of the same, in some newspaper published in Bangor.

SECTION 10. All property or money held in trust by this corporation shall constitute a special deposit, and the accounts thereof, and of said trust department, shall be kept separate, and such funds and the investment or loans of them shall be especially appropriated to the security and payment of such deposits, and not be subject to any other liabilities of the corporation; and for the purpose of securing the observance of this proviso, said corporation shall have a trust department in which all business pertaining to such trust property, shall be kept separate and distinct from its general business.

SECTION 11. All the corporate powers of this corporation shall be exercised by a board of trustees, whose number and term of office shall be determined by vote of the shareholders at the first meeting held by the incorporators and at each annual meeting thereafter. The affairs and powers of the corporation may, at the option of the shareholders, be entrusted to an executive board of five members, to be, by vote of the shareholders, elected from the full board of trustees. A majority of said board shall reside in this State.

SECTION 12. This act shall take effect when approved.

In House of Representatives, March 8, 1887.

This bill, having had three several readings, passed to be enacted.

Filed November 17, 1894. Rec'd Jan. 13, 1890—10.15 a. m.

American Ice Company
to Eastern Trust & Banking Co., Tr. } Trust Mortgage.

Liber No. 1439, folio 417 et seq. F. J. J.

This indenture made the second day of December, A. D. 1889, between American Ice Company, a corporation duly organized under the laws of the State of Maine, and located at Bangor in the county of Penobscot and State aforesaid, party of the first part, and the Eastern Trust and Banking Company, trustee, a corporation duly established under a charter granted by the State aforesaid, and located at Bangor aforesaid, hereinafter called the trust company, party of the second part, witnesseth,

That whereas said American Ice Company, at a meeting of its directors duly called and held on the 18th day of November, 1889, for the purpose as expressed in the call of providing for the issue of the first-mortgage bonds of the company to the amount and on the terms expressed in the vote copied below, the language of the proposed vote being embodied in the call, adopted the following vote: "That the president and secretary be authorized to make and execute a mortgage of all the property of the company including that to be purchased of E. M. Willis to any person or corporation as trustee to secure an issue of the coupon notes or bonds of the company to a total amount of forty thousand dollars ($40,000). Said notes or bonds and the interest thereon shall be of such denominations, and payable at such times and places and on such terms and conditions as the president and secretary may determine, the said officers are hereby authorized to do all things and execute all papers necessary for carrying out the purposes of this vote. And whereas in pursuance of said vote the American Ice Company acting by its president and secretary, has made its coupon notes or bonds numbered from one to one hundred and seventy-six inclusive, one hundred and twenty of the same being for one hundred dollars each, and fifty-six for the sum of five hundred dollars each, dated December 2nd, 1889, and payable in equal installments of five thousand dollars ($5,000) each in 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9 and 10 years from the first day of December, 1889, with interest at the rate of six (6) per cent. per annum payable semi-annually on the first days of June and December in each year at the office of said Eastern Trust and Banking Company in said Bangor, according to the tenor of the coupons attached thereto, all of which bonds are now in the hands of the party of the second part to be authenticated by *b*a certificate signed by it as being secured by these presents, and are held by it for delivery to the parties respectively entitled thereto, the form of each bond, of the coupons, and of the trustee's certificate thereon being substantially as follows, viz:

12 $—. UNITED STATES OF AMERICA. No. —.

American Ice Company First-mortgage 6 per Cent. Bond. Organized under the Laws of Maine.

Authorized issue, $40,000.

American Ice Company organized under the laws of the State of Maine, and having places of business in the city of Bangor, in the county of Penobscot and State b of Maine, and the city of Washington in the District of Columbia, promises to pay Eastern Trust and Banking Company or the bearer hereof the sum of — hundred dollars lawful money of the United States at the office of Eastern Trust and Banking Company in the city of Bangor, Maine in — years from the first day of December A. D. 1889, with interest on said sum at the rate of six (6) per cent. per annum, payable semi-annually on the first days of June and December in each year at the office of said Eastern Trust and Banking Company in said Bangor, according to the tenor of the coupons hereto attached upon the presentation and surrender of said coupons respectively. This bond is one of a series of one hundred and seventy-six bonds (176) fifty-six (56) of which are for five hundred dollars each and one hundred and twenty (120) for one hundred dollars each, amounting in the aggregate to forty thousand dollars, numbered respectively from one to one hundred and seventy-six both inclusive, all bearing even date herewith, executed and delivered in pursuance of a vote of the directors of said American Ice Company, duly authorized by the by-laws of said American Ice Company duly adopted on the eighteenth day of November 1889, authorizing the issue of said bonds and the execution and delivery of the mortgage hereinafter mentioned. Payment of this bond and of the coupons attached is secured in the manner and upon the terms therein stated by a first mortgage upon all the real estate wharves, ice-houses, stables, boilers, elevator and machinery situated in the town of Hampden in the county of Penobscot and State of Maine, and in the city of Washington, District of Columbia, bearing even date herewith, executed and delivered by it in pursuance of said vote to said Eastern Trust and Banking Company as trustee for the bondholders, which mortgage has been duly recorded in the registry of deeds for Penobscot county, Maine, and in the registry of land records for District of Columbia. Said mortgage is hereby referred to and the terms thereof made a part of this bond. This bond shall pass by delivery.

In testimony whereof, said American Ice Company has caused this bond to be signed and sealed in its name and behalf by its president and countersigned by its secretary, and the coupons hereto attached to be signed by its secretary the second day of December A. D. 1889.

AMERICAN ICE COMPANY.

Dated December 2nd, 1889.

CHAS. E. FIELD, Secretary.

Now then the party of the first part, in consideration of the premises and of the sum of one dollar paid by the party of the second part, receipt whereof is hereby acknowledged, and in order to secure due and punctual payment of said several bonds and of the interest thereon, has given, granted, bargained, sold, transferred and conveyed and does by these presents give, grant, bargain, sell, transfer and convey unto the party of the second part, trustee, as hereinafter provided and its successors in trust, with full power of succession to, and enjoyment of the franchises of the corporation, all its real estate, wharves, ice-houses, boarding-house, stables, boilers, elevator and machinery situated in the town of Hampden in said county of Penobscot and in the city of Washington in the District of Columbia, together with all and singular the privileges and appurtenances thereto belonging. It is understood that all the bonds authorized by the vote herein recited and secured by this instrument shall be delivered to the Eastern Trust and Banking Company as trustee, and by it certified to be of the series secured hereby and that all said bond- shall then be returned to and be at the disposition of said American Ice Company. The description of the real estate and rights owned by the American Ice Company which are her-in conveyed is as follows, viz: Two certain lots or parcels of land in Hampden in the county of Penobscot aforesaid bounded 14 and described as follows: That portion of the Cyrus Emery farm which lies between the Penobscot river and the New county road, being all of said farm lying east of said road, the same measuring nine hundred and sixty (960) feet more or less on said road, and containing thirty (30) acres more or less; and being the same premises conveyed by trustees by said Cyrus Emery's estate by said deed recorded in Penobscot Registry of Deeds vol. 502 page 288, to which deeds as well as to a deed from Augustus J. Emery recorded in said Registry of Deeds vol. 530 page 98 reference is hereby had. A lot formerly a part of the homestead of John Harden described and bounded as follows, viz: Beginning at a stake, on the dividing line between land of said Harden and land formerly of the heirs of Cyrus Emery, thence at right angles with said dividing line twelve and one-half rods more or less to the dividing line between land of said Harden and land of Doddwell; thence on said dividing line to the Penobscot river; thence down said river to said dividing line between land of said Harden and land formerly of the heirs of Cyrus Emery; thence on said Emery's line to the place of beginning. Together with all the buildings and fixtures of the two said above-described parcels of land, being the same premises conveyed by the Penobscot River Ice Company to said American Ice Company by deed dated June 10th, 1889, and recorded in the Penobscot Registry of Deeds, Book 593, page 449. Also all that piece or parcel of land with the improvements thereon lying in the city of Washington, in the District of Columbia, and being opposite square 270 in said city and District, commencing for the same at the southeast corner of square numbered two hundred and seventy, running thence southerly with the west line of Thirteenth street to the channel of the Potomac river, thence westerly with the said channel to a point opposite the southwest corner of said square numbered two hundred and seventy, thence due north to the said southwest corner of said square two hundred and seventy, following the eastern line of what is alleged to be Thirteen-and-a-half street, thence with the southern line of said square two hundred and seventy, two hundred and fifty-five feet one inch to the place of beginning; together with all the improvements, ways, easements, rights, privileges and appurtenances to the same belonging or in anywise appertaining, and all the remainders, reversions, rents, issues and profits thereof; and all the estate, right, title, interest, claim and demand, either at law or in equity, or otherwise however, of the said parties of the first part of, in, to or out of the said piece or parcel of ground and premises. Being the same premises conveyed by E. M. Willis and another to said American Ice Company by indenture dated December second, 1889, and recorded in land records of the District of Columbia Book 1445 page 16. Together with all the rights and easements, appurtenant, privileges or options, in the matters of wharving or other riparian rights of any kind whatsoever which may hereafter be acquired by said American Ice Company by virtue of the covenants and agreements in said deed of said Willis & al. contained. To have and to hold the above-described property, real estate, rights, and franchises with all the privileges and appurtenances thereto belonging unto the party of the second part, its successors and assigns, to its and their own use and behoof forever, but in trust nevertheless for the equal pro rata benefit and security of the holders of the above-mentioned bonds, at whatever period the same may be issued without any preference or priority of one bond over another and for the uses and purposes hereinafter declared.

Article 1. Until default shall be made in the payment of the principal or interest of said bond- or some of them, or in the maintenance of insurance, or in the payment of taxes or assessments as herein provided, or until default shall be made in respect to something by these presents required to be done by said party of the first part, the American Ice Company shall be permitted and suffered to possess, manage, develop, operate and enjoy the plant and property herein conveyed and intended so to be and to take and use the income, rents, issues and profits thereof in the same manner, to the same extent, and with the same effect as if this deed had not been made.

Article 2. If said American Ice Company shall well and faithfully pay the principal sum due on said bonds when the same become payable according to the tenor thereof, together with the interest accrued and due thereon, and shall pay all the coupons attached to said bond and each of them according to the tenor thereof on the presentation of the said coupons respectively and shall well and truly perform, according to the true intent and meaning hereof all the other things required by these presents to be done by said American Ice Company then these presents shall be void, but if default shall be made by said American Ice Company in the payment of said bonds or of any of them at the time they fall due and payable, or if said American Ice Company shall fail to pay said coupons or any of them according to the tenor thereof on the presentation and surrender of the same respectively, or if it shall fail faithfully to observe the requirements made of it by these presents and such default shall continue for the space of ninety days, then the whole amount of the principal of said bonds, together with all accrued and unpaid interest thereon (unless such default be waived by the holders of the majority of the bonds then outstanding as hereinafter provided) shall be deemed immediately due and payable; and it shall be lawful for the trustee to enter into or upon the premises and property hereby granted or intended so to be and to take possession of the whole or any part thereof and to sell and dispose of all and singular the premises, property, rights, interests and franchises hereby conveyed or mortgaged, or intended so to be, or such portion as the trustee may deem necessary at public auction in said Bangor upon such terms as to credit, partial credit and security for payment as it may think proper or expedient having first given public notice of the time and place of the sale or sales by advertisement printed not less than once a week for at least four successive weeks in one or more newspapers printed and published in said Bangor and also in Washington aforesaid. The trustee shall have the right to adjourn such sale or sales from time to time in its discretion giving reasonable notice 16 of each adjournment and after so adjourning to make the sale at the time and place to which the same may be adjourned; and no other notice or demand whatsoever to or upon the party of the first part shall be necessary. The trustee is hereby further authorized and empowered in its own name or in the name of the American Ice Company to make, execute, acknowledge and deliver to the purchaser or purchasers at such sale a good and sufficient deed or deeds of conveyance of the property so sold; and any sale made as aforesaid shall be a perpetual bar both at law and in equity against the*w* American Ice Company and all persons claiming by, through, or under it from claiming the property, rights, interest and franchises so sold or any interest therein. And for the purposes aforesaid the party of the second part and its successors in the trust are hereby constituted irrevocably the attorney of said American Ice Company. Out of the proceeds arising from such sale or sales the trustee shall first defray the expenses thereof, together with its just and lawful charges for services and expenses, including reasonable allowance for attorney and counsel fees and also all advances and expenses reasonably incurred by the trustee in operating, maintaining, or managing the property or business of the American Ice Company while in possession and all payments made by said trustee for taxes, assessments, insurance and other proper charges upon said premises and property. The balance of said proceeds shall be paid over ratably to and amongst the parties holding said bonds and coupons so far as any be necessary to pay the amounts then due upon the same including the principal and interest*ed* computed to the time of making the payment; and if any of said proceeds then remain, the remainder shall be paid over to said American Ice Company or its assigns. It is hereby declared and agreed that the receipt of the trustee shall be a sufficient discharge to the purchaser or purchasers for his or their purchase-money; and that the bondholders or any number of them or any person in their behalf may purchase at any sale made as aforesaid.

Article 3. The foregoing provision for a sale under the power aforesaid is cumulative with the ordinary remedy of foreclosure by entry or suit therefor, and the trustee hereunder may upon default being made as aforesaid, institute and carry out proceedings to foreclose this mortgage or deed of trust by suit or otherwise in such manner as may be authorized by law for the foreclosure of mortgages of real estate. And the American Ice Company hereby waives any and all rights of sale or redemption now or hereafter provided by the statutes of Maine or of the United States.

Article 4. Before proceeding to foreclose this deed or mortgage whether by sale under said power or otherwise the trustee shall have to right first to exact from the bondholders reasonable indemnity against loss and liability that may be incurred by it in so doing and upon the tender by the bondholders or any of them of such reasonable indemnity, whether previously requested of them, or not, it shall be the duty of the trustee in case of any default continuing on the part of said American Ice Company and not waived 17 as hereinafter provided, to foreclose in such lawful manner as the trustee may deem best.

Article 5. No delay or omission by the trustee in exercising the rights and powers herein granted shall be held to exhaust or impair such rights and powers or be construed as a waiver thereof, but it is hereby mutually agreed that the holders of a majority in amount of the bonds at the time outstanding may by and instrument in writing at any time, whether before or after the institution of foreclosure proceedings, waive, or instruct the trustee to waive any default provided always that no such act on the part of the bondholders shall extend to or be taken to effect any subsequent default, or impair the rights resulting therefrom.

Article 6. The American Ice Company agrees at all times upon request to furnish the trustee a schedule showing with reasonable detail the items of the estate, property and other things covered by the lien hereof or intended so to be; and the trustee shall have the power from time to time to release from the lien of this deed any of the property when in its judgment other property of equal value is substituted therefor and subjected to the lien hereof so that such release shall not injure the security or rights of the bondholders.

Article 7. The American Ice Company hereby expressly covenants and agrees to pay any and all taxes, assessments, and governmental charges assessed or laid upon the property herein conveyed or intended so to be and also to keep said premises and property at all times insured in such insurance companies as may be approved by the trustee in such amounts as shall reasonably protect all the insurable property payable in case of loss to the trustee as its interest may appear. In case of loss the insurance money may be applied by the trustee toward the renewal of, or additions to the property destroyed or injured, or at the option of the trustee the money may either be retained and invested in such securities as it approves, as a sinking fund for the redemption of the bonds when due, or be applied to the payment of the principal of such of the aforesaid bonds as may be at the time due and unpaid and of the interest which may at that time have accrued upon the principal and be unpaid, without discrimination or preference; and ratably to the aggregate amount of said unpaid principal and accrued and unpaid interest, rendering the surplus if any to the American Ice Company or to whomsoever may be, lawfully and equitably entitled to receive the same.

Article 8. The trustee shall not be liable for any neglect, mismanagement, or misfeasance of any of its or their agents, attorneys, or servants in relation to taking possession of, controlling, operating, managing, or selling the premises or property aforesaid when said agents and servants have been selected with reasonable care.

Article 9. The American Ice Company agrees hereafter from time to time during the existence of this trust and mortgage to make, execute, acknowledge, and deliver all such further instruments and conveyances as in the opinion of the legal counsel of the trustee may be necessary to facilitate the execution of said trust or 18 further to secure the rights and remedies of the holders of said bond.

Article 10. The word "trustee" as employed in this instrument shall be taken to mean the trustee hereunder for the time being whether said party of the second part or its successor or successors in said trust.

Article 11. The party of the first part as the agent of the party of the second part shall forthwith cause this indenture to be recorded as a mortgage both of real estate and personal property as may be required by the laws of the State of Maine and of the District of Columbia, so as to preserve and protect the rights of the bondholders and all parties hereto.

In testimony whereof the said American Ice Company has caused these presents and a duplicate hereof to be signed in its name and behalf and its corporate seal to be affixed to this and said duplicate by Francis H. Clergue, its president and Charles E. Field, its secretary, and the said Eastern Trust and Banking Company has caused these presents and said duplicate to be signed in its name and behalf and its corporate seal to be affixed hereto and to said duplicate by George B. Cauney its secretary, the day and year first above written.

E. T. & B. Co., EXHIBIT No. 4.

Filed November 17, 1894.

This agreement, made this twenty-ninth day of January, A. D. 1894, by and between William G. Johnson, assignee of the American Ice Company, of the city of Washington, District of Columbia, of the first part, and Edward M. Willis, of the same place of the second part witnesseth:

That the said William G. Johnson, assignee as aforesaid, under and by virtue of the authority and direction of the supreme court of the District of Columbia, in its order this day passed in the suit of Charles E. Field vs. The American Ice Company and others, No. 15063 of the equity docket of said court, in consideration of the rents, covenants and agreements hereinafter mentioned and on the part of the said party of the second part to be paid, observed and performed, hath let and demised and doth by these presents let and demise unto the said party of the second part all that certain real estate, wharves and improvements in the city of Washington, District of Columbia, known as all the property of the American 20 Ice Company lying southwest of Water streets opposite square numbered two hundred and seventy, with the ice-house and wharf situated thereon and the necessary tools and machinery for the discharging and storing of ice, together with the scales and office furniture for the term of one year, beginning therefor on the twenty-ninth day of January, A. D. 1894, and fully to be complete and ended on January 28th, 1895.

To have and to hold the same unto and to the use of the said party of the second part his executors and administrators, yielding and paying therefor monthly and on the last day of each and every month during the continuance of this agreement the monthly rent of one hundred and thirty dollars to the said party of the first part, his heirs, executors and administrators at his or their place of business No. 344 D street, northwest, Washington, D. C., or wher-soever the said office or place of business for the time being may be.

Provided always, and it is hereby expressly stipulated and agreed, that this lease and all rights of the parties hereunder, shall cease and determine in the event of the eviction by the lawful enforcement of the rights of the first-mortgage bondholders of the said American Ice Company or eviction by the lawful enforcements of the rights, if any, of the Government of the United States, or an actual sale under the direction of the court by said party of the first part of said property or any portion thereof.

And it is further covenanted and agreed that should the said monthly rent or any part thereof be and remain unpaid for and during the space of ten (10) days next after the day whereon the same ought to be paid by the terms hereof, although no demand shall have been made therefor, and which demand is hereby expressly waived, then the said party of the first part, his heirs, executors and administrators shall have the right to enter upon said premises and the party of the second part utterly to put out and expel without any notice of thirty days as provided in section 681 of the Revised Statutes of the United States relating to the District of Columbia or any other notice whatsoever; all notice whatsoever, being by the said party of the second part, hereby expressly waived, and this lease shall thereupon, at the option of the party of the first part cease and determine.

It is also hereby covenanted and agreed by the said party of the second part that he shall not assign this lease nor sublet the said premises without the written consent of the party of the first part had and obtained, and that he, the said party of the second part, will at all times during his continuance in the possession of the said premises acknowledge the title and defend the possession of the said party of the first part, his heirs, executors and administrators, and that he will not acquire or seek to acquire title thereto, nor acknowledge title thereto in any other person without first surrendering actual possession thereof to the party of the first part his heirs, executors and administrators, except by the written consent of the said party of the first part, his heirs, executors and administrators.

It is further covenanted and agreed that the said party of 21 the second part shall keep the said premises in the same good condition and repair in which they now are, damage by fire, the elements or trespassers and ordinary wear and tear from reasonable and careful use of the same excepted.

It is further stipulated and agreed that the breach by the party of the second part of any of the covenants, agreements, stipulations or provisions herein contained, shall give the party of the first part the same right of possession and determination of this lease without notice, as is provided in case of non-payment of rent, and no such breach shall be treated as waived unless expressly so waived in writing, and no waiver of one breach shall operate as a waiver of any other breach.

In testimony whereof, the said party of the first part, as assignee, as aforesaid, and the party of the second part, have hereunto set their hands and seals on the day and year first hereinbefore written, in duplicate.

Opinion.

Filed December 29, 1894.

EASTERN TRUST & BANKING CO. vs. EDWARD M. WILLIS. } Law. No. 36903.

SAME vs. WILLIAM G. JOHNSON. } Law. No. 36904.

These cases are identical in fact, save as to the property involved, and differ as to defendants. They have been submitted upon an agreed statement of facts, applicable to and filed in each case, for the judgment of the court without a jury. They were instituted under what is known as the landlord & tenant act, to recover possession of the realty described in the proceedings, before a justice of the peace, and were certified to this court by the justice upon a plea of title.

In each case the pl'ff claims a fee-simple by the declaration filed in compliance with the rule of court.

By the agreed statement of facts it appears that the rights of the plaintiff are fixed and determined by a deed of trust from the American Ice Co., a copy of which is filed as an exhibit with the statement.

The deed of trust conveys the property in question to the pl'ff to secure the payment of certain bonds described therein, with accruing interest. By it it is provided that the American Ice Co. shall be permitted and suffered to possess, manage, &c., and to take and use the income, rents, &c., until default be made in the payment of the principal or interest of the bonds. It is also provided that 24 upon default made, &c., it shall be lawful for the trustee to enter into the premises & to take possession of the whole or any part thereof, and to sell & dispose of all or such portion as the trustee may deem necessary, at public auction, in Bangor, upon terms of sale prescribed.

The statement of facts shows that default was made in the payment of the debt secured by the trust, and that the property in question was advertised for sale by the trustee and was sold Sept. 4, 1894, the purchasers being a committee acting for the bondholders; that the terms of sale have not been complied with, because it had been agreed between the purchasers and trustee that the latter should first obtain possession of the property; that these actions were instituted pursuant to such agreement.

One of the objections urged by the defendants to maintaining these actions is that the pl'ff is a foreign corporation authorized by its charter to conduct its business solely within the State of Maine, and that under the policy of the laws in force in the District of Columbia corporations organized therein were not permitted to exercise the powers of trustee. The charter of the pl'ff, which has been put in evidence, while not containing express authority to transact business out of the State, does not prohibit it, neither did any law in force in the District of Columbia, nor any public policy deduced from general legislation, nor any settled adjudications of the highest courts of this District prohibit the exercise of such powers by a foreign corporation within its limits. Under these circumstances, in harmony with the general law of comity among the States, a foreign corporation may exercise its powers in the District of Columbia.

Cowell v. Colo. Springs Co., 100 U. S., 55.
Christian Union v. Fount, 101 U. S., 352.

It is also urged as matter of defence that the relation of landlord and tenant did not exist between the pl'ff and def'ts, and that therefore the law did not authorize these actions and the justice of the peace had no jurisdiction of the cause of action.

The Court of Appeals of this District has recently decided that the act of Congress of July 4, 1864, entitled "An act to regulate proceedings in cases between landlord and tenants in the District of Columbia," applied to the case of a purchaser at a sale made by a trustee under an ordinary deed of trust of land as security for debt and grantee of such trustee against the grantor in such deed of trust in possession. That court held that the reservation in the deed of trust of the right of possession to the grantor until default made in the payment of the debt secured operated as are demise by the trustee (grantee) to the grantor, and created the relation of landlord & tenant between those parties; that the grantee of the trustee was vested with his rights to the possession and might maintain the action.

Laring v. Bartlett, Law Rep., June 21, '94.

25 In the case of Luchs v. Jones, 1 MacA., 345, the general term dismissed the appeal for want of jurisdiction, but the justice delivering the opinion of the court held that under like circumstances the grantor in possession after sale made and deed delivered by the trustee to the purchaser became, by operation of law, tenant by sufferance of the purchaser, & that the landlord & tenant act of July 4, 1864, did not require that the relation of the landlord & tenant should exist by the convention of the parties in order to give jurisdiction.

That decision has never been regarded as authority, and for nearly twenty years this court, both in special & general term, has uniformly held that unless the conventional relations of landlord & tenant existed between the parties a justice of the peace under that act has no jurisdiction of a question of disputed possession, and it has so ruled in cases like that of Luchs & Jones.

See Jennings & Webb, 20 D. C., 317.

Whether the reasoning of the Court of Appeals be approved or not, its conclusion is authoritative with this court, and to me appears to settle the question of the jurisdiction of the justice of the peace in this case, notwithstanding the fact that in the cases at bar the controversy is between the trustee and the grantor in the trust deed, while the case adjudicated was between the purchaser from the trustee and the grantor in the trust deed.

It is further urged in defence that inasmuch as it appears by the agreed statement of facts that the trustee has executed the trust power to the extent of making the sale and has entered into an agreement with the purchasers to obtain possession for them that these actions cannot be maintained.

Whether the deed of trust contemplates the possession of the trust property by the trustee for the purposes of management upon default made in the payment of the debt need not be determined, for the trustee has not assumed to exercise such power. It does in terms authorize the trustee to take possession of the property and to sell such portion as it may deem necessary upon default made by the debtor. Such possession is authorized in aid of a sale to be made by the trustee. The power is to take possession and sell. The trust deed also unquestionably confers authority upon the trustee to sell without first taking possession. This power the trustee has exercised; it has made sale.

The right of the purchaser will be perfected upon the execution & delivery of a deed by the trustee, and that is the sole remaining function to be performed by the trustee under the power of sale. No power is given it to take or acquire possession after sale made at the instance or for the convenience of the purchaser. Its powers are limited to those declared in the trust deed. Those powers cannot be enlarged or added to by subsequent convention between it and the purchaser. It is not indicated that possession is sought in its own right, but at the instance of and in order that when acquired it may be turned over forthwith to the purchaser

It has the title, for it has not yet conveyed, but, under existing circumstances, it has neither the right of property nor the 26 right of possession. These actions cannot be maintained and judgment must be for the defendant in each case.

I, John R. Young, clerk of the supreme court of the District of Columbia, do hereby certify that the foregoing pages, numbered from 1 to 49, inclusive, are true copies of the originals in causes numbered 36903 and 36904, wherein The Eastern Trust and Banking Co. is plaintiff and Edward M. Willis and Wm. G. Johnson are the respective defendants, as the same remains upon the files and records of said court.

Endorsed on cover: District of Columbia supreme court. No. 425. The "Eastern Trust and Banking Company," appellant, vs. Edward M. Willis and William G. Johnson, assignee. Court of Appeals, District of Columbia. Filed Jan. 28, 1895. Robert Willett, clerk.

28 WEDNESDAY, April 10th, A. D. 1895.

THE EASTERN TRUST AND BANKING COMPANY, Appellant, vs. EDWARD M. WILLIS and WILLIAM G. JOHNSON, Assignee. } No. 425.

The argument in the above-entitled cause was commenced by Mr. B. F. Leighton, attorney for the appellant, and was continued by Mr. Wm. G. Johnson, attorney for the appellees, and was concluded by Mr. B. F. Leighton, attorney for the appellant.

29 THE EASTERN TRUST AND BANKING COMPANY, Appellant, vs. EDWARD M. WILLIS and WILLIAM G. JOHNSON, Assignee. } No. 425.

Opinion of court per Mr. Justice SHEPARD:

The appellant is a corporation created by act of legislature of the State of Maine, and is fully empowered to receive conveyances in trust and to perform all the duties of trustees.

The American Ice Company is also a corporation of the State of Maine, having its principal office in said State. It owned property in Maine and also certain real estate in the District of Columbia, used in carrying on its business in selling ice in the city of Washington.

To secure a regular issue of $40,000 of bonds, the American Ice Company, on December 2, 1889, conveyed to the Eastern Trust and Banking Company, aforesaid, all of its real and personal property in Maine, and also the lots in controversy, situated in this District, in trust to secure the payment of said bonds.

30 The trust deed contains the apt words of conveyance usual in such instruments. Right of possession is reserved to the grantor until default in payment of interest, taxes, &c. But it is also expressly stipulated that in case of default in the payment of any interest coupon or coupons, and the continuance thereof for the space of ninety days, the entire debt shall become immediately due and payable, and that "It shall be lawful for the trustee to enter upon the premises and take possession of the whole or any part thereof, and to sell and dispose of all and singular the premises, property, &c., &c., or such portion as the trustee may deem necessary, at public auction, in Bangor, upon such terms as to credit, partial credit and security for payment as it may think proper or expedient, having first given public notice," &c. It is further stipulated that the provision for sale is to be cumulative with the ordinary remedy of foreclosure in equity.

The bonds were purchased by different persons for value received, and are still held by them. Default was made in the payment of interest due December, 1893, and not having been waived, the principal of the bonds became due and payable.

On October 13, 1894, the American Ice Company made an assignment for the benefit of its creditors to William G. Johnson, assignee. The assignee accepted the trust, took possession of the lots in Washington, and leased them to Edward M. Willis.

The bondholders, in pursuance of the terms of the trust deed, directed the trustee to proceed with the execution of the trust. The trustee advertised all of the property for sale at Bangor, in accordance with the terms of the instrument, on May 4, 1894, but adjourned the same to September 8. A committee of bondholders made a bid for the property, the terms of which do not appear, and it was declared sold to them, upon condition that the same should not be completed or title passed until the trustee should first obtain possession of the property.

On July 30, 1894, the trustee served a written notice upon both Johnson, assignee, and his tenant Willis to remove from the premises at the end of thirty days. They refused to surrender possession, and on September 17, 1894, a proceeding was instituted against them by the appellant before a justice of the peace under the landlord and tenant act. Defendants appeared and interposed pleas of title; whereupon, as required by law, the case was certified by the justice of the peace to the supreme court of the District for trial. In said court appellant filed a declaration, upon which issue was duly joined.

Trial by jury was waived, and the case was submitted to the court upon an agreed statement of facts substantially set forth above. The defences made in the court below were: 1. That the action could not be maintained under the landlord and tenant act. 2. That the deed in trust was not executed or certified to so as to be legally registered in the District of Columbia. 3. That the appellant was not competent to take and execute the trusts sought to be created. 4. That the trust had been executed by sale before the institution of the suit, and the right to possession had passed from the trustee to the purchasers. The court overruled all these defences but the last one, and rendered judgment thereon for the defendants, from which this appeal has been prosecuted.

1. The appellees renew in this court, under the agreed statement of facts, the defences made below, save that denying the right of the trustee to maintain the special possessory action provided in the statute (R. S. D. C., sec. 684).

That question has been settled by the decision in Loring v. Bartlett, 22 Wash. Law Rep., 398, wherein it was held by this court that purchasers claiming under a sale made by trustees, in accordance with the provisions of an ordinary deed of trust, could maintain the action as provided in that statute.

2. It is unnecessary to pass upon the regularity of the certificate of the clerk of Penobscot county, Maine, to the official character of the notary public of that State, who certified to the acknowledgment of the execution of the trust deed, or upon the validity of the record of that instrument in the District of Columbia. The instrument was formally executed by the grantor and the grantee with their respective corporate seals and regularly delivered to the latter, who held it in the execution of the trust. Neither acknowledgment for record, nor record, were necessary to pass the title, or to protect the rights of the beneficiaries of the trust, as against an assignee for the benefit of creditors. Colbert v. Baetjer, 22 Wash. Law Rep., 763.

3. The objection that the appellant had no power to take under the conveyance, or to execute the trusts created thereby, is without merit. It was incorporated by special act of the legislature of Maine, and its domicile is in that State. The terms of the charter are ample to cover all the powers that it may exercise under said trust deed, and there is nothing therein to indicate that its corporate powers can only be exercised within the limits of the State of its creation. Appellant had the undoubted right, in so far as its act of incorporation is concerned, to do business in the District of Columbia, to accept trusts to be performed therein, and to sue in its courts. Bank of Augusta v. Earle, 13 Pet., 519. The mere fact that the laws prevailing in the District of Columbia, at that time, did not authorize the organization of corporations with the same powers that had been conferred upon appellant by the laws of Maine, is not sufficient to prevent it from the exercise of its powers in said District. A settled policy of prohibition is not to be inferred from the mere absence of legislation upon the subject. This is the well-established doctrine of the Supreme Court of the United States. Cowell v. Springs Co., 100 U. S., 55, 59. In that case, it was said: "If the policy of the State or Territory does not permit the business of the foreign corporation in its limits, or allow the corporation to acquire or hold real property, it must be expressed in some affirmative way; it cannot be inferred from the fact that its legislature has made no provision for the formationof similar corporations, or allows corporations to be formed only by general law." See, also, Christian Union v. Yount, 101 U. S., 352, 356; Taylor on Corporations, sec. 384, and cases cited.

4. The judgment of the court of which appellant complains proceeds upon the ground that appellant, in the execution of the trust, actually sold the property in controversy before commencing this proceeding; that its powers became exhausted thereby, and that the title and right to the property must be considered as having passed to the bidders at said sale notwithstanding the conveyance had not been executed and delivered. This is a proceeding at law where recovery must be had upon the legal title; still it is not necessary to determine what weight should be given to that point had there been a regular and binding sale by the trustee, lacking completion only in the execution and delivery of the evidence of title.

Passing by the question, which has not been argued, whether a valid sale could have been made under the trust deed, in Maine, of land situated in the District of Columbia, we find in the statement of facts, that the offer for sale was made upon condition that the trustee should first obtain the possession of the property, when only it would be perfected. It is very doubtful, to say the least, if a valid sale could be made upon such condition. If it could not, however, the effect of the attempt would be to avoid the sale and not the condition. Under any view that might be taken, the trustee could not compel the purchaser to accept the conveyance and pay the purchase-money, without the performance of the condition, or the waiver thereof by the purchaser.

Clearly, then, the trust has not been executed, the title has not passed out of the trustee, and the right of possession remains in it still.

For the reason given, the judgment must be reversed, with costs to the appellant, and the cause remanded, with direction to render judgment for it upon the agreed statement of facts, in conformity with this opinion. It is so ordered.

THE EASTERN TRUST AND BANKING COMPANY, Appellant, vs. EDWARD M. WILLIS and WILLIAM G. JOHNSON, Assignee. } No. 425.

On motion of Mr. C. Carlisle, attorney for the appellees in the above-entitled cause, it is ordered by the court that a writ of error to remove said cause to the Supreme Court of the United States be, and the same is hereby, allowed, on giving bond in the sum of seven thousand dollars.

34 UNITED STATES OF AMERICA, ss:

The President of the United States to the honorable the judges of the Court of Appeals of the District of Columbia, Greeting:

Because in the record and proceedings, as also in the rendition of the judgment of a plea which is in the said Court of Appeals, before you or some of you, between The Eastern Trust and Banking Company, appellant, and Edward M. Willis and William G. Johnson, assignee, appellees, a manifest error hath happened, to the great damage of the said appellees, as by their complaint appears, we, being willing that error, if any hath been, should be duly corrected and full and speedy justice done to the parties aforesaid in this behalf, do command you, if judgment be therein given, that then, under your seal, distinctly and openly, you send the record and proceedings aforesaid, with all things concerning the same, to the Supreme Court of the United States, together with this writ, so that you have the same in the said Supreme Court, at Washington, within 30 days from the date hereof, that, the record and proceedings aforesaid being inspected, the said Supreme Court may cause further to be done therein to correct that error what of right and according to the laws and customs of the United States should be done.

35 UNITED STATES OF AMERICA, ss:

To The Eastern Trust and Banking Company, Greeting:

You are hereby cited and admonished to be and appear at a Supreme Court of the United States, at Washington, within 30 days from the date hereof, pursuant to a writ of error filed in the clerk's office of the Court of Appeals of the District of Columbia, wherein Edward M. Willis and William G. Johnson, assignee, are plaintiffs in error and you are defendant in error, to show cause, if any there be, why the judgment rendered against the said plaintiffs in error, as in the said writ of error mentioned, should not be corrected and why speedy justice should not be done to the parties in that behalf.

Witness the Honorable Richard H. Alvey, chief justice of the Court of Appeals of the District of Columbia, this 18th day of June, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and ninety-five.

For Appellees.

36 Know all men by these presents that we, Edward M. Willis and William G. Johnson, as principals, and Augustus Burgdorf, as surety, are held and firmly bound unto Eastern Trust and Banking Company in the full and just sum of seven thousand dollars, to be paid to the said Eastern Trust and Banking Company, its certain attorney, executors, administrators, or assigns; to which payment, well and truly to be made, we bind ourselves, our heirs, executors, and administrators, jointly and severally, by these presents.

Sealed with our seals and dated this — day of June, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and ninety-five.

Whereas lately, at a Court of Appeals of the District of Columbia, in a suit depending in said court between Eastern Trust and Banking Company and the said Edward M. Willis and William G. Johnson, a judgment was rendered against the said Willis and Johnson, and the said Willis and Johnson having obtained a writ of error and filed a copy thereof in the clerk's office of the said court to reverse the judgment in the aforesaid suit, and a citation directed to the said Eastern Trust and Banking Company, citing and admonishing it to be and appear at a Supreme Court of the United States to be holden at Washington within 30 days from the date thereof:

Now, the condition of the above obligation is such that if the said Willis and Johnson shall prosecute said writ of error to effect and answer all damages and costs if they fail to make their plea good, then the above obligation to be void; else to remain in full force and virtue.

MOTION TO DISMISS PLAINTIFF'S APPEAL, OR TO AFFIRM JUDGMENT BELOW, AND NOTICE OF MOTION.

Now comes the defendant in error, by Mr. B. F. Leighton, its counsel, and moves the court to dismiss the writ of error in the above entitled cause, for want of jurisdiction, because said writ of error purports to have been sued out on a judgment of the Court of Appeals of the District of Columbia, in a cause in which the matter in dispute is less than the sum of five thousand dollars ($5,000) exclusive of costs, as will appear by the record, the validity of any patent or copyright not being involved therein, nor the validity of a treaty or statute of, or an authority exercised under the United States, drawn in question therein, as will also appear from the record.

And the said defendant in error, by its counsel aforesaid, further moves the court to affirm the said judgment on which said writ of error purports to have been sued out, because, although the record in this case may show that this court has jurisdiction in the premises, yet it is manifest that said writ of error was sued out for delay only.

vs.

EASTERN TRUST AND BANKING COMPANY, A Corporation. Defendant in Error.

STATEMENT OF CASE.

These cases were brought before Lewis I. O'Neal, a justice of the peace in and for the District of Columbia, to obtain possession, under the Landlord and Tenant Act, of certain real estate situated in said District, fully described in the pleadings herein. The plaintiff in error interposed pleas of title, and gave bond as provided by law, and the cases were thereupon certified to the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, for trial. The defendant in error filed a declaration of ejectment as required by the rules of said court, and the cases being thus at issue, the parties thereto entered into an agreed statement of fact in writing, whereby said causes were to be submitted to the court for its determination, without a jury. The substance of said agreement is as follows, to wit:

The defendant in error is a body corporate, organized under the laws of the State of Maine, and having its principal place of business at the City of Bangor, in that State.

The American Ice Company, also a body corporate, organized under the laws of said State, and doing business therein, and also in the District of Columbia, did on the 2d day of December, A. D. 1889, execute and deliver unto the Eastern Trust and Banking Company a certain deed of trust in the nature of a mortgage, upon certain real estate described therein, a part of which is situated in the State of Maine, and the remainder in the City of Washington, District of Columbia, to secure the payment of its certain bonds of various denominations, aggregating $40,000, payable to the order of the said defendant, in three, four, five, six, seven, eight and nine years after date, with interest thereon at the rate of 6 per cent. per annum. Said deed of trust was duly recorded in the land records of the District of Columbia. The original deed bears the impress of the corporate seal of the American Ice Company, and of the Eastern Trust and Banking Company, upon or near the names of said companies subscribed to said deed of trust, and it is admitted that said seals were affixed to said deed at the time of or before the execution and delivery thereof, and as required by the witnessing clause thereto, and that the Recorder of Deeds failed to note the same upon the records. The bonds were executed and delivered in due form of law to said Trust Company, and by it delivered to the parties entitled thereto by the terms and provisions of said deed of trust. Said bonds were taken by the parties to whom they were delivered for value, in the regular course of business, before maturity, and are now held and owned by them or by their assigns or legal representatives, except as to the first instalment thereof, which fell due December 2, 1892, which was paid, together with the interest accrued and due upon all of said bonds. The next instalment of bonded indebtedness which became due in December, 1893, was not paid, nor was the interest then falling due paid, nor have either of said sums or any part of them been since paid or satisfied in any manner. The parties holding said bonds have not, nor have any of them waived their rights to said payments, in accordance with the tenor and effect of said bonds, and of said deed of trust, by the terms of which the residue of said bonded indebtedness, to wit, the sum of $35,000, together with accrued interest thereon, was, at the commencement of these suits, due and payable.

On the 13th day of October, A. D. 1893, the American Ice Company, by an instrument of writing of that date, executed and delivered in due form of law, made an assignment of all of its property of what kind soever for the benefit of its creditors, to Wm. G. Johnson, plaintiff in error, who accepted the trust, and entered upon its discharge. Subsequently, as such assignee, he leased that portion of the real estate which is situated in the City of Washington, unto Edward M. Willis, one of the plaintiffs in error, who entered and took possession thereunder, and still retains possession.

Said lease is in writing, and bears date January 29, A. D. 1894, and is for the period of one year from said date, for rental of $130 per month. Record, 4, 5, 6.

After the default in the payment of the second instalment of bonds, and of the interest on the bonded indebtedness had continued for a period of more than ninety days, the bondholders, or those holding more than 50 per cent. of the value thereof, directed the said trustee to proceed in the execution of said trust in accordance with its terms and provisions; in pursuance of which direction the said defendant, on the 30th day of July, 1894, caused a thirty days' notice to quit to be served upon each of the plaintiffs in error, on the theory that they were statutory tenants by sufferance under the law, and that the instrument securing the indebtedness created the relation of landlord and tenant between the said Trust Company and plaintiffs; and thereafter to wit, on the 17th day of September, 1894, the said defendant caused a seven days' summons to be issued by Lewis I. O'Neal, a justice of the peace, as aforesaid, as provided by

Sec. 684, of the Revised Statutes of the United States relating to the District of Columbia, against each of said plaintiffs, who appeared, and the cases proceeded as hereinbefore stated. After the default had been made in the payment of said bonds, and the interest thereon, in pursuance of the direction of the bondholders, and of the powers conferred upon and vested in defendant by said deed of trust, it advertised said real estate for sale, in accordance with the requirements of said deed of trust, and exposed the same for sale at public auction, in the City of Bangor, at which sale a committee, acting for said bondholders, purchased the property embraced in the deed of trust for the bondholders benefit. The terms of said sale have not yet been complied with, and no deed has been made to the purchasers, it being understood and agreed between the purchasers and the defendant, that said trustee should first obtain possession of the property. Record, 6 and 7.

On said statement of facts, judgment was rendered for the said defendant by the Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia, whereupon plaintiffs brought the causes to this court, on writ of error.

DEFENDANT'S BRIEF.

1st. The matter in controversy in these suits, is the right of present possession of the real estate described therein, and not the right of property. The indebtedness will not be extinguished by them, nor the right of redemption barred. The title to the land is not in controversy, and will not be determined by this litigation. Said Justice Cox, speaking for the court, in the case of Jennings vs. Webb, a case similar to these:

> "While our rule requires the plaintiff to file a declaration as in ejectment, that does not convert the proceedings into an action of ejectment at all, in > which the plaintiff recovers upon the strength of his title. In this proceeding, unless he establishes the relation of landlord between himself and his tenant, no matter what the form of the declaration is, he is not entitled to recover; it is still a landlord and tenant proceeding." 20 D. C., 321.

The plaintiff, Johnson, pleads title in himself, and Willis, in Johnson, under whom he claims. This claim of title is controlled not only by the nature of the suit, and the fact that whatever the judgment may be, it determines no question of title, except that of the present right of possession, but also by the facts admitted by the plaintiffs in respect to the nature and quality of the title claimed. It is the whole record, and not the claims of the parties in the proceedings, that must control the question of jurisdiction.

Said the court, in Gray vs. Blanchard: "We hear the case upon the record which is sent up, and if, taking the whole record together it appears that we have no jurisdiction, the case must be dismissed." 97 U. S. 564.

This doctrine was affirmed in the case of The Banking Association vs. The Insurance Association, 102 Wall. 121.

The case of Tintsman vs. The National Bank is directly in point. In this case the Court said:

> "This writ of error was brought by the defendant below to reverse a judgment against him of more than five thousand dollars; but on looking into the record we find that the case was heard on an agreed statement of facts in the nature of a special verdict, in which it appeared that the plaintiff claimed of the defendant eight thousand two hundred and thirty-three dollars and seventy-nine cents, and interest from June 4, 1876. The defendant admitted that he owed of this amount five thousand and ninety-nine dollars and fifty-nine cents, for which the plaintiff was entitled to a judgment. The only controversy was as to the liability of the defendant for the difference between what he admitted to be due and what the plaintiff claimed, or three thousand one hundred and > thirty-four dollars and twenty cents. This, then, is the amount actually in dispute, and as it is less than five thousand dollars, we have no jurisdiction." 100 U. S. 6.

The record shows affirmatively that the plaintiff Johnson, as assignee, holds the title of the American Ice Company, and none other; that he has succeeded to the rights of that company, and to none greater, and that those rights are subordinate to those of the defendant, as trustee in the deed of trust made by the American Ice Company before its assignment. This brings us to the consideration of the main questions in the case, to wit, What are the relative rights of the American Ice Company and the defendant, as grantee in the deed of trust, as to the possession of the property embraced therein, before and after breach, and what is the value of the plaintiff Johnson's right of possession, as successor to said company, as disclosed by the record?"

2. A mortgage vests the legal title to the mortgaged property in the mortgagee, subject to be defeated on the happening of a condition subsequent, generally the payment of money. The right of possession passes to the mortgagee as an incident of the title, unless reserved by the terms of the mortgage. "Where the mortgagor is left in possession, the true inference to be drawn is an agreement that he shall possess the premises at will, in the strictest sense," is the language of the court in Keech vs. Hall, the principal case. Douglas R. 21.

While the language here is modified in the subsequent case of Morse vs. Gallimore, Id. 279, and the mortgagor is said to be "like a tenant at will, or a tenant at will quodan modo," yet the right of the mortgagee to terminate the relation at any time, and to obtain immediate possession of the premises is reaffirmed, and this continued to be the settled law in England until the Conveyancing Act of 1881. Doe vs. Giles, 5 Bing. 421; Thunder vs. Belcher, 3 East, 449; Dows vs. Telford, 1 App. Cas. 414; 45 L. J. Ex. 613. This doctrine was recognized and adopted by the courts in Maryland, as well as the general common law principles relating to mortgages. In Jamieson vs. Bruce the mortgagor sought to make the mortgagee obtaining peaceable possession of the mortgaged property before forfeiture, a trespasser. Justice Archer, speaking for the Court, said:

> "This is not a case in which there is any expressed covenant that the mortgagor shall continue in possession until default in payment, nor is it a case in which by fair inference or necessary implication from the instrument, the conclusion can be drawn that the mortgagor was quietly to enjoy the mortgaged property, but on the contrary, the instrument is wholly silent on the subject. The parties therefore, must stand upon their legal rights, according to the terms used in the conveyance.
> "Courts of equity consider a mortgage as a mere security for money. But this is not the light in which it is viewed in courts of law, which, as Mr. Justice Bailey observes in 1 Dow. and Ry. 273, generally know nothing about mortgagor or mortgagee. They looked solely to the estate conveyed by the instrument, and consider the mortgagor in possession, unless under the circumstances above mentioned, as the mortgagee's tenant, and strictly within the definition of a tenant at will, not to be sure, entitled to all the privileges of a tenant at will, or answerable for the burthens of such an estate, but liable to have his possession defeated in the same manner." 6 G. and J. 50.

Chancellor Bland, in Clark vs. Abbott, says:

> "The authorities show very clearly that a mortgagee having given notice to the tenant holding the mortgaged premises, and the leases granted by the mortgagee, either before or after the mortgage, is entitled to receive from the tenant the rents in arrears at the time of the mortgage, as well as those which accrue afterwards."
>
> 1st Md. Chancery, 375.
> Morse vs. Gallimore, supra, and other English cases, are cited in support of this statement.

In the case of Van Ness vs. Hyatt, brought here on appeal from the Circuit Court of the District of Columbia, it was decided that a mortgagor's interest in the mortgaged property cannot be levied upon by a fieri facias, and gave as a reason for such decision, that the common law as relates to mortgages, derived from Maryland, prevails here, and that the mortgagor's interest was an equitable right to redeem, and that the legal right was in the mortgagee. Citing Jamison vs. Bruce, supra, and relying upon it as the law of the forum. 13 Peters, 294.

The case of Stelle vs. Carroll was also brought here from this District. The plaintiff was a widow, and had joined her husband in the mortgage of certain of his real estate situate in said District. The husband conveyed the mortgaged property to one Miller, who conveyed it to the defendant. The wife did not join in the deed to Miller. The husband died, and his widow brought suit for dower in the mortgaged premises. The court held she was not entitled; that the husband after the mortgage had but an equitable and not a legal estate. 12 Peters, 201. That a widow is not dowable of an equity of redemption was admitted to be the law of this jurisdiction in Sykes vs. Chadwick, 18 Wallace, 144. Justice Miller, in his dissenting opinion, said:

> "The District of Columbia, for which this court (the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia) sits, and whose laws it administers, has preserved the principles of the common law, less affected by statutes, than any part of America, and perhaps, less than England, herself."

The clause in the deed of trust permitting the American Ice Company to retain possession of the property until default, is similar in language, to the clause in the deed of trust considered and interpreted by the Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia, in the recent case of Loring vs.

Bartlett. Chief Justice Alvey, speaking for the Court, said:

> "The effect of the deed to the trustees was to vest the fee simple estate in them from the date of the deed; and but for the express provision or reservation in the deed which we have already recited, whereby the appellee was allowed to retain possession of the property until default made, the right of possession would also have vested in the trustees from the date of the deed." Vol. 22, Wash. L. R., No. 25, 398.

That the mortgagor at common law, was, in the absence of covenant or express agreement, a tenant at will to the mortgagee, is fully shown by the authorities cited: that such was the law of this jurisdiction until the Landlord and Tenant Act of July 4th, 1864, is equally clear. By that act it was declared that a tenancy at will should not arise or be created, without an express contract or writing to that effect, and all occupation, possession or holding of any messuage or real estate, without express contract or lease, or by such contract or lease the terms of which have expired, shall be deemed and held to be tenancies by sufferance. Sec. 680. Rev. Statutes, D. C.

This statute converts the tenancy at will theretofore existing between a mortgagor and mortgagee into a statutory tenancy by sufferance.

3d. The mortgage in controversy in these cases expressly provides that "The American Ice Company shall be permitted and suffered to possess, manage, develop, operate and enjoy" the plant and property therein conveyed, and "to take and use the income, rents, issues and profits thereof" until default in the payment of the indebtedness secured thereby, inter alia, whereupon "it shall be lawful for the trustee to enter into or upon the premises and property granted, and take possession of the whole or any part thereof."

This provision, independently of the statute, operates as a redemise of the mortgaged premises, and entitles the mortgagor to possession, until default, or breach of its covenants. Until then it holds an interest in the nature of a term of years.

Wilkinson vs. Hall, 3 Bing. N. C. 508.
Doe d. Roylance vs. Lightfoot, 8 M. & W. 564.
Doe d. Parsley vs. Day, 2 Q. B. 147.

In Loring vs. Bartlett, supra, the court cited with approval and followed Wilkinson vs. Hall, and said in construing the clause reserving possession to the grantor until default:

> "The question is whether, by reasonable construction and legal operation of the clause in the deed reserving to the appellee the right to possess and enjoy and to receive to her own use the rents and profits of the mortgaged premises until default made, had the effect of a redemise of the premises to the mortgagor or grantor, and upon principle we think that is the effect of such stipulation or reservation in the deed. The same doctrine was maintained in the well-argued case of 'The Georges Creek Coal & Iron Co. vs. Detmold,' 1 Md. 225."

This being the law, the mortgagor, after default, is in occupation and possession of the mortgaged premises under a "contract or lease the terms of which have expired," and must be deemed and held to be a tenant by sufferance within the exact language of the statute.

The section of the Landlord and Tenant Act under discussion was before the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia in the case of Luchs vs. Jones, decided in 1874. In deciding this case the court said:

> "In the case at bar it appears that the premises were owned by the defendant at the time he executed the deed of trust, and that upon a sale being made by the trustee the plaintiff became the purchaser. As a matter of law, the legal title was vested by virtue of such purchase in the plaintiff, and the defendant (the grantor) remaining in possession of the > premises, without any agreement to that effect, became by operation of the statute a tenant by sufferance. 1 MacArthur, 346."

From this interpretation of the statute the courts have never departed. Fiske vs. Bigelow, 2 MacArthur, 427; Barber vs. Harris, 6 Mackey, 586; affirmed in 129 U. S. 370.

It has become a rule of property not to be disturbed by the court, after this lapse of time, whatever may be its opinion as to the proper interpretation of the statute.

The mortgage made by the American Ice Company expressly provides that upon default being made in the payment of the bonds secured thereby the defendant, as trustee therein, may enter and take possession. The deeds of trust interpreted by the court in Luchs vs. Jones, Barber vs. Harris, and Loring vs. Bartlett contained no such provision, but in terms only authorized the trustees named therein to sell in case of default.

That there has been such a default in the payment of the bonds secured by the deed of trust in controversy as entitles the defendant herein to take possession of the property is admitted (Record, p. 7). That this right of possession is a legal and not an equitable right is certain. If plaintiff's possession is not an occupation and possession of real estate under contract, the terms of which have expired within the meaning of the Landlord and Tenant Act, it is an occupation and possession held without right, to recover which ejectment would lie. In either view this court is without jurisdiction to try these cases. In Barry vs. Mercein the court held that the matter in dispute must be "money or some right the value of which in money can be calculated and ascertained." 5 How. 120. This rule has been followed in many cases. Potts et al. vs. Chumasero et al., 92 U. S. 358.

How can the value of a tenancy at will or by sufferance be ascertained—by what rule measured? The nature and quality of such possession destroys its pecuniary value.

Can a possession of which one can be rightfully deprived at any time, and of which possession is being sought by another having a better right, under any circumstances, be worth $5,000? The property in controversy rents for $1,560 per annum. It was the duty of Mr. Johnson, as assignee, to get the highest obtainable rent for it. The court must assume that he did his duty. Have the plaintiffs the right, in face of the admitted facts, to maintain possession of the property for a period of more than three years, until the rent received and paid shall equal $5,000? If not, the court has no right to hear these cases.

The other points of law raised by the Record are:

(a) Does the law prevailing in the District of Columbia permit the ~~plaintiff~~ Robert Lant to act as trustee, and to execute the trust conferred upon it by the deed of trust in controversy?

(b) How does the omission of the Recorder of Deeds to copy the ~~plaintiff's~~ defendants corporate seal upon his records, affect the ~~plaintiff's~~ defendants right to recover?

(c) Is the power of sale in the deed of trust void? If so, how does its invalidity affect the ~~plaintiff's~~ defendants right to recover?

Of these in their order:

1. A charter of incorporation imparts to the body corporate individuality and personality. Within its scope, terms and provisions, the corporation may do whatever a natural person, acting in his legal capacity, might do. This faculty, thus created, it possesses and may exercise as certainly as may an individual, not only in the place of its creation, but elsewhere, unless forbidden by law or the policy of the foreign State.

> "Beyond, as well as in the limits of the domestic sovereignty, the only difference between a natural and an artificial person, as to the recognition of their personal existence, would be, that wherever the law creating the latter should be recognized, the existence of such a being would be legal only, while that of the other would be actual as well as legal; and this is the reason why, in the absence of any local law or policy to the contrary, the same code of comity will apply to both of them in the courts of all liberal and enlightened nations."

Lathrop vs. The Commercial Bank of Scioto, 8 Dana, 114.

Connecticut Mutual Life Insurance Co. vs. Cross et al., 18 Wis., 119.

Cowell vs. Springs' Co., 100 U. S. 56.

The ~~plaintiff's~~ defendants' charter provides that it shall be possessed of all the powers, privileges, and immunities, and subject to all the duties and obligations conferred upon corporations by law, except as provided therein; it empowers the corporation, inter alia, to hold by grant, assignment, transfer, devise or bequest, any real or personal property, or trust duly created, and to execute trusts of every description. Sections 1 and 3 (Record, 8). The power to act as trustee, and to execute the trusts created by the conveyance of December 2, 1889, is thus expressly conferred, and cannot be questioned in ~~plaintiff's~~ defendants' domicile. The charter does not forbid the ~~plaintiff~~ defendant from acting in the quality of trustee or agent, or of exercising any of the powers conferred upon it, elsewhere than in Maine. An express authorization to exercise its chartered powers in a foreign State, would be simply nugatory. The right, privilege, or power sought to be exercised, is not strictly speaking, a franchise, but a right belonging to a corporation equally to an individual, and may be exercised here, unless some statute either distinctly forbids it, or indicates that such exercise is opposed to local public policy. The question is a legislative and not a judicial one. Said Chief Justice Christiancy in Thompson vs. Waters:

"In ascertaining what the legislative policy is, we are to be guided not only by such express provisions as they have chosen to make and the natural implications from them, but also from silence, which may furnish as clear an indication of what that policy was intended to be, as can be drawn from what they have expressed; since, if they have made no provision at all upon that particular subject or branch of the subject or question involved, they intended to adopt, and left the courts to apply, the generally received principles of comity, and to that extent to adopt the foreign law; and if they have chosen to leave the matter without any legislative provision, the case ought to be a very clear one indeed, which will authorize the courts to refuse such recognition, on the ground that it would be prejudicial to the State."

25 Mich. 214.

2. There is no statutory inhibition or expression of legislative judgment that is against the interests of the citizens of this jurisdiction to permit a foreign corporation from exercising the powers and discharging the duties imposed upon the ~~plaintiff~~ defendant by the deed of trust under consideration.

The deed of trust to ~~plaintiff~~ defendant was duly recorded and acknowledged. Its delivery passed the title to the grantee, in praesenti, and whether recorded or not, was good as against the grantor and his assigns without consideration. Were authorities needed to support a proposition so fundamental and well established, they are abundant.

Brown vs. Moulton, 22 N. H. 468.
Jackson vs. Allen, 30 Ark. 110.
McMahon, 26 Wis.

The instrument is also good as to creditors and purchasers without notice and for valuable consideration. It was properly acknowledged, and was by law entitled to record.

Richardson's Supplement, Ch. 99, 315 (Vol. I).

The absence of the seal from the record may have in legal effect changed the character of the writing from a sealed to an unsealed instrument, as to parties having the right to rely upon the record, but it created a lien of record, of which parties dealing with the property were bound to take notice, equally as though no error had occurred in recording the deed of trust; much less can the ~~defendant~~ plaintiffs, holding the title of the American Ice Company, and standing in its place with its rights not enlarged or qualified by the recording act, take advantage of the error.

3. A power of sale granted by a mortgagor on the creation of the mortgage does not conflict with the principles of equity embraced in the maxim "once a mortgage always a mortgage," or to the rules of equity as applied to mortgages. The object of a deed of trust is to secure a debt; to effect that purpose the power of sale must exist somewhere, either in express terms in the instrument itself, to be exercised as therein provided, or in some tribunal charged with the enforcement of such securities. A sale by the court is only a mode of applying the pledged property to the satisfaction of the debt. No other agent to make the sale being designated in the instrument creating the pledge, the exercise of the power of implication is referred to the courts, but it does not follow that it is not equally competent for the grantor by express language to designate some person or corporation to make it. No legal principle is thereby violated.

Said Chief Justice Gordon in Lawrence vs. The Farmers' Loan & Trust Co.:

> "The power to dispose of the property to satisfy the debt for which it is pledged is not collateral, but like the right of redemption, inheres in the subject. It is not an addition to the mortgage, but a part of it, and the mode in which it may be exercised is as proper a subject of agreement prima facie, as the the terms of the mortgage itself."

OCTOBER TERM, 1895.

EDWARD M. WILLIS et al., Plaintiffs in Error,
vs.
THE EASTERN TRUST AND BANKING COMPANY, Defendant in Error.
No. 663.

Brief for Plaintiffs in Error in Opposition to Motion to Dismiss or Affirm.

This action was brought by the defendant in error before a justice of the peace under section 684 of the Revised Statutes of the United States relating to the District of Columbia against the assignee of the American Ice Company, and his tenant, upon the averment that plaintiffs in error were "tenants by sufferance" of the defendant in error. (Rec. pp. 1, 2.)

The plaintiffs in error, denying the relation of landlord and tenant, in accordance with section 687 of said revision and with the provisions of the common law rules of the Supreme Court of the District, interposed a plea of title, averring the title to be in the plaintiff in error, William G. Johnson. (Rec. p. 2.) Whereupon the cause was transferred to the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, as required by the act of Congress, and there tried upon an agreed statement of facts, (Rec. pp. 4–21,) upon which judgment was rendered for plaintiffs in error. (Rec. p. 21.)

From this judgment defendant in error appealed to the Court of Appeals, (Rec. p. 22,) and that court reversed the judgment in favor of plaintiffs in error and directed judgment to be entered for the defendant in error. (Rec. p. 3.)

To reverse this last judgment the plaintiffs in error sued out a writ of error bringing the case to this court.

The motion to dismiss is upon the ground that "the matter in dispute is less than the sum of five thousand dollars." (Deft's brief, p. 1.)

It is admitted by defendant in error, by stipulation filed in this court, (see appendix to this brief,) that the value of the property involved in this suit is more than five thousand dollars, but the jurisdiction of this court is denied, because it is contended by defendant in error that "the matter in controversy in these suits is the right of present possession of the real estate described therein, and not the right of property." (Deft's brief, p. 6.)

I.

The Real Matter Adjudicated is the Right of Property and not merely of Possession.

It is respectfully submitted that the record in this case discloses the fact that the judgment in this cause not only passes the right of possession, but extinguishes all the legal title of the plaintiff in error to the property. The defendant in error claims under a deed in fee simple, though in and upon certain trusts, among others in trust to sell and convey in fee simple. (Rec. pp. 11–19.)

The defendant in error, claiming to act under the said deed of trust from the American Ice Company, sold, in the city of Bangor, Maine, real estate situated in the District of Columbia. The purchasers at this sale, who have never been disclosed, are not parties to this proceeding, but the defendant in error claims to act as their agent in bringing this suit to recover possession for such purchasers.

It thus appears that the purpose of this proceeding is to vest, in these unknown purchasers, a complete title in fee to the premises. The right of property and right of possession are claimed by virtue of the deed of trust and sale thereunder, while the only remaining element of a perfect title, namely, actual possession, is hereby sought, upon the ground that the right of property is in the parties for whom defendant in error is claiming to act.

By the second article of the deed (Rec. pp. 15, 16) the defendant in error is authorized to sell the land upon default, and make a valid conveyance thereof to the purchaser, either in its own name, or in the name of its grantor; and it is further provided (Rec. p. 16) that "ANY SALE made as aforesaid shall be a PERPETUAL BAR, both at law and in equity, against the American Ice Company, and all persons claiming by, through, or under it from claiming the property, rights, interest, and franchises SO SOLD or any interest therein. And for the purposes aforesaid the party of the second part [defendant in error] and its successors in the trust are hereby constituted irrevocably the attorney of said American Ice Company."

It will thus be seen that by the terms of the deed under which defendant in error claims the sale extinguishes all the property rights of the grantor and of the plaintiffs in error claiming under it. In this proceeding the defendant in error claimed to have made such a sale of the property in accordance with the terms of the deed, as appears by the agreed statements of facts, wherein it is alleged (Rec. p. 7) that "the sale was adjourned until September 8, A. D. 1894, at the same place, at which sale a committee, acting for said bondholders, purchased the above-described real estate for their, the bondholders', benefit."

While the action was brought under the laws relating to proceedings between landlord and tenant, it will be seen that the adjudication was upon the plea of title, the defendant in error claiming that the title of plaintiff in error had been extinguished by virtue of the execution of the power of sale in the deed of trust, and the right of property and possession thereby vested in the purchaser, and the judgment appealed from being in favor of the defendant in error, upon the facts and claims disclosed by this record, extinguishes the entire legal title of the plaintiffs in error to the property and every interest therein. The whole theory of the recovery here is that the legal title of the plaintiff in error is at an end, and it is nowhere suggested by defendant in error that any right or title remains in the plaintiffs in error.

Indeed, it is obvious the defendant in error, claiming to have executed the deed of trust by an actual sale, and bringing this proceeding in the alleged capacity of agent or attorney for the purchasers to obtain possession for them, a judgment for possession, upon a plea of title, could not be recovered, except upon the adjudication of the legal right of property adversely to the claims of the plaintiff in error, defendant below.

It is, therefore, obvious that, while possession was sought, it was claimed upon the theory of the right of property, upon which ground alone the court could give the possession.

It is respectfully submitted that the motion to dismiss should be denied.

II.

The Writ of Error is not Sued Out for Delay.

The defendant unites with its motion to dismiss a motion to affirm, on the ground that "it is manifest that said writ of error was sued out for delay only," and an argument of twelve printed pages, containing copious citations of authorities, is submitted in support of this proposition.

It would seem at the outset that a proposition requiring such elaborate presentation cannot be so entirely free from difficulty as to justify the claim that the writ of error is manifestly sued out for delay only, and thereby deprive the adverse party of his right to be heard upon a lawful writ of error.

Nor will the court assume that the plaintiff in error who prosecutes this writ, not in his own behalf, but as an assignee for the equal benefit of all creditors, including the defendant in error, would prosecute it merely for delay. This proceeding grows out of an alleged sale, in Bangor, Maine, of real estate situated in Washington City, to undisclosed purchasers, for an undisclosed price, for the benefit of the bondholders and to the exclusion of the general creditors.

At the very threshold of the case is found a question of difficulty and great importance, as to which the decisions of the courts of this District have been variant, and as to which an authoritative decision of this court has never been had, namely, whether a summary proceeding for the recovery of possession under the landlord and tenant act will lie in a case where the technical relation of landlord and tenant never existed.

The earliest reported decision of the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia upon this question is that of Spalding v. Hall, (6 D. C. Rep. 123.) In that case the court say, (p. 129:)

"If this language be understood in its broadest acceptation, it would seem to imply that any one who had a legal title to the premises held by the tenant might institute this summary proceeding to recover possession, whether that title was derived from the actual landlord or from some other source. Obviously, that cannot be the intent and meaning of this language; for if so it would at once subvert the common law action of ejectment, and substitute this summary proceeding in its place. The use of the words 'persons entitled to the premises' instead of the word 'landlord,' as in the first section, evinces an intention on the part of the legislature to extend this summary remedy beyond the actual lessor or landlord.

"The true intent and meaning of the legislature was (I think) to extend this remedy to all persons who, by the act of the lessor or by operation of law, are placed in the same relations to the tenant as the original lessor, to wit, the grantees or assignees, devisees, and heirs-at-law of the lessor.

"If this construction of the statute be the true one, it follows that these complainants cannot institute this summary proceedings against the defendants in this case. They are not grantees, devisees, or heirs-at-law of the lessor of the premises in dispute. They certainly are not the landlords of these defendants. Before the expiration of the term of the tenants now holding over, the plaintiffs or complainants obtained from Mrs. Scott, the lessor of the defendants, a lease of the premises for the term of five years, to commence at the expiration of the defendants' tenancy. No relation, therefore, of landlord and tenant ever subsisted between these parties by express contract or by implication of law. This exposition of the statute will confine its provisions to what is its declared purpose, viz., to regulate proceedings in cases between landlord and tenant."

Thus it will be seen that the law was limited by this decision in its application to cases where the technical relation of landlord and tenant existed, extending it only to those in privity with them as grantees, heirs, or devisees of the landlord and assignees of the tenant.

The first departure from this ruling is that found in the case of Luchs v. Jones (1 MacA. 345). This decision, however, was mere dictum, as the court, in its opinion and judgment, dismissed the case for want of jurisdiction, and, as said by Mr. Justice Bradley, in disposing of this case in the court below, (Rec. p. 25): "That decision has never been regarded as authority, and for nearly twenty years this court, both in special and general term, has uniformly held that unless the conventional relations of landlord and tenant existed between the parties, a justice of the peace, under that act, has no jurisdiction of a question of disputed possession, and it has so ruled in cases like that of Luchs v. Jones."

In the case of Fiske v. Bigelow, (2 MacA. 427,) the question was not raised or decided, and was, like the case of Luchs v. Jones, supra, one of which the same justice had held they had no jurisdiction.

In the case of Barber v. Harris, (6 Mackey, 586, and 129 U. S. 366,) cited by defendant in error, the only question presented and decided was that upon certiorari to a justice of the peace, the court could not look into the merits of the case as on appeal, but could only consider whether the record, by its averments, disclosed a case of jurisdiction.

And the only inference to be drawn from the opinion is that the conventional relation of landlord and tenant must be shown to exist in order to give the remedy, for the court says in its opinion, quoted with approval by this court in its decision, (129 U. S. 371:) "These averments constitute fully a statement of the relation of landlord and tenant between the parties. Now whether the proof came up to these averments or not cannot be inquired into upon a writ of certiorari. Certiorari goes only to the jurisdiction. It does not go to any errors of judgment that may have been committed by the justice in the progress of the exercise of that jurisdiction."

This language of the court is a clear declaration that the proofs must come up to these averments of the conventional relation of landlord and tenant, as otherwise the language used would be insensible.

Furthermore, as appears by the record in that case, the plaintiff was the grantee of the defendant's lessor, and was within the rule of privity established in the case of Spalding v. Hall, supra.

In the case of Jennings v. Webb, (20 D. C. 317,) cited by defendant in error, the court, through Mr. Justice Cox, referring to the proceedings under the landlord and tenant act, say:

"In this proceeding, unless he establishes the relation of landlord and tenant between himself and the defendant, no matter what the form of the declaration is, he is not entitled to recover. I have always held that at special term, and that is the opinion we entertain now. It is still a landlord and tenant proceeding."

This was the state of the decisions by the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, while it was the court of last resort in this District.

The Court of Appeals of this District having been substituted for the general term of the Supreme Court as the court of last resort, took a different view of this question in the case of Loring v. Bartlett, (Wash. Law Rep. vol. 22, No. 25, p. 398,) and held the statute to extend to cases where no conventional relation of landlord and tenant existed. The Court of Appeals, in its opinion, takes no notice of any of the decisions of its predecessor, the Supreme Court of the District, but cites only the case of Barber v. Harris in this court, (129 U. S.,) which, as before shown, does not decide or involve the question.

It is submitted that the decisions of the Court of Appeals though of equal are of no more binding authority now than those of the Supreme Court of the District were when they were rendered, both courts being at the time of rendering their opinions the courts of last resort of this District.

It is respectfully submitted that in the state of conflict of decisions upon this question alone, and in view of the fact that the court of first instance decided this case in favor of plaintiffs in error, it cannot be successfully contended that this writ of error is so obviously sued out for delay only so as to debar plaintiffs in error of the right to have their cause argued and decided in this court upon its merits.

The construction of the landlord and tenant act in this District, by a court of final resort, settling these conflicting decisions, after full argument and consideration, it is submitted, is of the highest importance to this community and the bar of the District, who, like the courts, are divided in opinion as to its proper construction.

Whether the laws of this District permitted a foreign corporation to execute such a trust as is here attempted; whether, under its charter, this corporation was not expressly limited to acting within the State of its creation; whether, having executed the trust by a sale of the property, it has not exhausted all its powers and left all further action to the purchasers; whether it could sue as agent or attorney for the purchasers, are all questions which properly arise on this record, but which counsel for plaintiffs in error does not deem it necessary to discuss in this brief, as, if the court has jurisdiction of the case and there is any real question to be decided, that is sufficient to entitle the parties to have their case heard upon oral argument on the merits.

Conclusion.

It is confidently submitted that the real question determined being the right of property, the motion to dismiss must be denied, and there being no colorable ground for the motion to dismiss, the motion to affirm cannot be rightfully entertained; but even if the motion to dismiss had any apparent foundation, the record discloses that the writ of error has been sued out in good faith by one in a purely fiduciary character in the discharge of his duty to all the creditors, including the bondholders, for the review of real questions of grave importance, and not for the purposes of delay.

STIPULATION OF COUNSEL.

It is hereby stipulated and agreed by and between counsel for the plaintiffs in error and the defendant in error that the value of the property in dispute largely exceeds five thousand dollars.

The defendant in error, in its motion to dismiss herein, contends merely that the present right of possession, as distinct from the right of property in the real estate in controversy, is less than five thousand dollars.

BRIEF FOR PLAINTIFFS IN ERROR.

This cause is brought here by writ of error to review the judgment of the Court of Appeals of the District of Columbia (Rec. 30).

A motion to dismiss was filed at the last term, but was not decided, the court having postponed the disposition of that motion to the hearing on the merits. It is submitted that the jurisdiction of this court is clear; the questions raised by the motion to dismiss are fully discussed in the brief for plaintiffs in error already on file, and the justice of the position there taken will be made manifest by the presentation of the case on the merits.

The proceeding by which this litigation was begun was an attempt by a Maine Trust Company, not authorized by its charter or by Congress to do business in the District of Columbia, to enforce a deed of trust as to real property in this District, as against an assignee for the benefit of all creditors, including those secured by the deed of trust, not by appropriate proceedings in equity, but before a justice of the peace, a court of limited and special jurisdiction and by a limited and special statutory proceeding, viz: under the Landlord and Tenant Law.

STATEMENT OF THE CASE.

The defendant in error is a corporation created by a special charter from Legislature of the State of Maine (Rec. 8, 10), and claims under a deed of trust in the nature of a mortgage to secure bonds in the amount of forty thousand dollars conveying real property in the State of Maine and in the city of Washington (Rec. 11, 19).

The proceeding originated before a justice of the peace in this District upon the allegation that the plaintiffs in error were tenants by sufferance of the defendant in error, whose tenancy and estate in the land had been determined by the service of a thirty days' notice to quit (Rec. 1, 2).

The property involved in this proceeding, which is located in the city of Washington, as also the property in Maine, is claimed to have been sold by the defendant in error, as trustee, by a public auction in the city of Bangor, Maine (Rec. 7).

To whom the property was sold, for what price, and upon what terms nowhere appears.

It is readily admitted on behalf of the assignee, plaintiff in error here, that whatever the legal infirmities of the Maine Trust Company in regard to this trust in the District of Columbia, the said company and the bondholders secured have the fullest right to the protection of a court of equity, to which tribunal the plaintiff in error is amenable as to his own trust, and any other affecting his rights or the property assigned, but his contention is—

I. That the Maine Trust Company cannot in any court of law in the District of Columbia insist upon a legal right to enforce the deed of trust—

(a) because its charter confined the operations of the company to the State of Maine.

(b) because the policy of the laws of Congress relating to the District of Columbia, did not, at the date of the deed, permit the acceptance by a foreign corporation of the trust;

(c) because the policy of the laws of Congress relating to the District of Columbia did not, at the date of the attempted execution of the trust, permit such execution by a Maine Trust Company which has not complied with the conditions required by Congress.

II. That the proceeding was in effect an attempt to foreclose a mortgage by a special summary proceeding in a justice's court, the court and the proceeding being alike without the contemplation of the contract sought to be enforced.

There are only two ways of enforcing rights secured by a deed of trust in this jurisdiction.

1st. By proceeding to execute the power of sale under the provisions of the deed of trust without the aid of any court.

2d. By asking the aid of a court of equity in what is in effect a foreclosure proceeding.

Here the Maine Trust Company has undertaken to combine both methods in a proceeding under the Landlord and Tenant Act before a justice of the peace, and without having attempted the complete enforcement of the trust according to law, either in pais under the provisions of the deed of trust, or by appropriate proceeding in a court of competent jurisdiction.

III. That even supposing the corporation itself to be free from legal infirmity, the trustee, under a deed of trust to secure $40,000 in bonds on an alleged default of $35,000, cannot in effect foreclose the mortgage by a summary proceeding under the Landlord and Tenant Act, before a justice of the peace, the real controversy being as to sums and questions of which a justice of the peace has no jurisdiction.

(a) The amount of the debt and default is far beyond the jurisdiction of a justice of the peace.

(b) The title is in question and the jurisdiction of that question is expressly denied to the justice of the peace in any proceeding.

IV. The relation of landlord and tenant did not exist between the parties, and for that reason the justice of the peace had no jurisdiction of the particular proceeding chosen.

The plaintiff in error, Johnson, assignee of the American Ice Company, the grantor of the defendant in error, claims the title to the property by virtue of the deed of assignment to him for the benefit of creditors (Rec. 5).

Under the deed of assignment and under the law authorizing its execution (act of February 24, 1893, 27 Stat., p. 474), he has the duty of protecting all the creditors of the American Ice Company, both resident and nonresident, secured and unsecured, and believing this to be an attempt by some of the bondholders to sacrifice the property and secure it for themselves to the exclusion of other creditors, deems it to be his duty to resist such attempt.

It is not denied that the bondholders have an equitable lien for the security of their bonds which they can properly enforce in the courts of this District as the first lien on the property, but it is denied that the defendant in error has the legal title to said property, or the right of possession thereof.

The defendant in error claims to have sold the property in pursuance of the mortgage because of default in the payment of the bonds and that as part of the terms of sale the defendant in error agreed to secure possession of the property for the purchaser (Rec. 7).

By the second article of the deed of trust under which defendant in error claims (Rec., pp. 15, 16), the trustee is authorized to sell the land upon default, and to make a valid conveyance thereof to the purchaser, either in its own name or in the name of its grantor; and it is further provided (Rec., p. 16) that—

> "ANY SALE made as aforesaid shall be a PERPETUAL BAR, both at law and in equity, against the American Ice Company, and all persons claiming by, through, or under it from claiming the property, rights, interests and franchises so SOLD or any interest therein."

The third article (Rec. 16) contains a waiver of the right to redeem under any existing or future laws of the United States. By the same article the right to the ordinary remedy by judicial proceedings for foreclosure is expressly secured (Rec. 16).

When the proceedings were instituted before the justice of the peace the plaintiffs in error interposed a plea of title in accordance with the provisions of the statute and the rules of court (Rec. 2, 3), and the cause being certified to the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, judgment was entered for the plaintiffs in error (Rec. 21), which judgment was reversed by the Court of Appeals (Rec. 30) and this writ of error sued out.

ASSIGNMENT OF ERROR.

The court below erred—

1. In holding that the Maine corporation was legally competent to execute the trust in the District of Columbia by any proceedings at law.

2. In holding that the terms of the deed of trust constituted the relation of landlord and tenant between the Maine Company and its grantor within the true intent and meaning of the law of the District of Columbia.

3. In holding that the justice of the peace had jurisdiction of the proceeding brought by the Maine Company.

4. In holding that defendant in error was entitled to judgment.

5. In not giving judgment for the plaintiff in error.

ARGUMENT.

The deed of trust in this case undoubtedly constituted a valid equitable first lien to secure whatever was due to the bondholders, but the Maine Trust Company, the defendant in error, had no legal and competent authority actively to execute the trusts in this District.

I.

The Maine Company was Legally Incompetent Actively to Execute Trusts in this District.

This deed was executed December 31, 1889 (Rec. 18), and recorded here January 13, 1890 (Rec. 11). At that time there was no law in force here permitting corporations of this character to be created or to act in this District.

Counsel are not unmindful of the ruling of this court in Christian Union vs. Yount, 101 U. S. 352, and the cases there referred to, but it is respectfully submitted that this corporation is not within the principles of that case.

By the terms of the charter creating the defendant in error certain limitations were imposed which are utterly inconsistent with its exercise of the functions here attempted. A corporation, while a legal entity, can do no personal act, but must always act through agents.

By the second clause of the charter it is provided:

> "Section 2. The corporation hereby created shall be located at Bangor, Penobscot County, Maine, and may establish agencies in any part of this State" (Rec. 8).

Expressio unius exclusio alterius; and besides the purpose and importance of this limitation is accentuated by the reservations of the ninth section (Rec. 9), specially providing for visitation by the State's officer.

The laws of the United States contemplate that all foreign corporations doing business in this District shall have agencies here to answer the process of the courts of this District, as they would otherwise be wholly irresponsible.

By the eleventh section of the Act of Congress of February 22, 1867 (14 St. 404), now Section 790 of the Revised Statutes relating to this District, it is provided that:

> "In actions against foreign corporations doing business in the District, all processes may be served on the agent of such corporation or person conducting its business, or, in case he is absent and cannot be found, by leaving a copy at the principal place of business in the District, and such service shall be effectual to bring the corporation before the court.'

It is clear from this that Congress did not intend that foreign corporations should carry on business here without being amenable to the courts of the District. And, as this corporation, by the terms of its charter, was precluded from having offices or agencies outside of the State it was expressly disabled from meeting the requirements of the laws in force in this District.

Moreover, when Congress did, for the first time, by the Act of October 1, 1890 (26 St. 625–632), authorize corporations of this character to be formed and to do business in this District, it imposed numerous restrictions and requirements not found in the charter of the defendant in error, indicating the purposes and policy of Congress in this District upon that subject.

The act further imposes specific restrictions upon foreign corporations as a condition precedent to their right to exercise any of the functions attempted to be exercised by the defendant in error here.

The eleventh section of that act provides:

> "That any safe deposit company, trust company, surety or guaranty company, or title insurance company, now incorporated and operating under the laws of the United States or of the District of Columbia, or any of the States, and now doing business in said District, may avail itself of the provisions of this act on filing in the office of the Recorder of Deeds of the District of Columbia, or with the Comptroller of the Currency, a certificate of its intention to do so, which certificate shall specify which one of the three classes of business set out in section one it will carry on, and shall be verified by the oath of its president to the effect that it has in every respect complied with the requirements of existing law, especially with the provisions of this act; that its capital stock is paid in as provided in section twenty-one of this act and is not impaired, and thereafter such company may exercise all powers and perform all duties authorized by any one of the subdivisions of section one of this act in addition to the powers now lawfully authorized by such company." (26 St. 628.)

And in the fifth section there is the following proviso:

> " . . . Provided, however, that no corporation created and organized under the provisions hereof, or availing itself of the provisions hereof as provided in section eleven, shall be authorized to transact the business of a trust company, OR ANY BUSINESS OF A FIDUCIARY CHARACTER, until it shall have filed with the Comptroller of the Currency a copy of its certificate of organization and charter, and shall have obtained from him and filed the same for record with the said Recorder of Deeds a certificate that the capital stock of said company has been paid in and the deposit of securities made with said comptroller in the manner and to the extent required by this act." (Ib. 626.)

It is not pretended that the defendant in error, before its attempted foreclosure of the deed of trust and its proceedings here in this District, complied or attempted to comply with any of the provisions of the Act of 1890, or that it ever had an agent or place of business here as contemplated by section 790 of the revision above quoted.

It cannot be objected that the Act of Congress of October 1, 1890, could not apply because this deed to the defendant was executed in December, 1889, for by taking a conveyance to itself of a trust to be executed here, a foreign corporation could not defeat the power of Congress to regulate the manner and conditions of its exercising its functions in this District.

The right of a foreign corporation to operate at all in this District is subject to the will of Congress, which can at any time regulate or prohibit altogether the exercise of any of its functions here.

When, therefore, this defendant in error, in 1894, undertook to actively exercise its corporate functions as a trustee in this District, by the proceedings below, it was without legal authority, and it was acting in defiance of the laws of Congress.

But when the deed of trust is closely examined it will appear that the defendant in error itself, at the time of the execution of the deed, recognized its incapacity to act outside of the State of Maine, and never contemplated doing any act in execution of the trust within the District of Columbia, but carefully prescribed that even the sale of the District real estate should be made by it at public auction "IN SAID BANGOR" (Rec. 15) several hundred miles away.

It is only on this theory that a provision authorizing a trustee to sell real estate located in a populous city, at a place hundreds of miles away from its location, can be explained or justified.

It is not contended that the rights of the bondholders to the equitable first lien upon this property are in any way affected by the legislation of Congress. Those rights remained and still remain unaffected and unimpaired, but the situation of the bondholders is precisely as it would have been had the trust deed been to any other grantee incapable of executing the trusts, or had the trustee, being a natural person, died leaving no heirs. They would then have been compelled to proceed in equity, either to foreclose the mortgage or for the appointment of a new trustee, in the courts of this District where the property is situated.

In such a proceeding the property would have been sold here, instead of several hundred miles away, and the court could and would have protected the rights of general creditors under the assignment, while giving to the bondholders the exact measure of their rights.

As it is, this is an attempt to dispose of local assets—real estate—in a foreign market, to an undisclosed purchaser for an undisclosed price by an unauthorized trustee, and in defiance of the lex loci rei sitae.

II.

This Proceeding was in effect a Proceeding to Foreclose a Mortgage.

It is to be observed that the deed under which the defendant in error claims, of itself, gives no right of possession to the grantee.

On the contrary, by the first article of that instrument it is expressly stipulated that—

> "until default be made in the payment of the principle or interest of the bonds, or some of them, or in the maintenance of insurance, or in the payment of taxes or assessments," &c—

the grantor, the American Ice Company—

> "shall be permitted and suffered to possess, manage, develop, operate and enjoy the plant and property herein conveyed and intended so to be and to take and use the income, rents, issues and profits thereof, in the same manner, to the same extent, and WITH THE SAME EFFECT AS IF THIS DEED HAD NOT BEEN MADE." (Rec. 1, 5.)

Thus it will be seen that no possession passed and no right of possession passes to the grantee by the grant, but only on condition subsequent; which condition is matter in pais, namely, default in respect of the debt.

By the second article of the deed it is stipulated that if and when such matter in pais shall arise, i. e., the default in payment, then, for the first time—

> "it shall be lawful for the trustee to enter into or upon the premises and property hereby granted," etc., and "to take possession of the whole or any part thereof, and to sell and dispose of all and singular the premises, property, rights, interests," etc., "at public auction in said Bangor" (Rec. 15).

The right of possession is not only dependent upon the condition subsequent, as shown above, but it is a limited right for a specific purpose, and none other, that is, "to sell and dispose" of it, and there is no right of possession to accrue except for the purposes of a sale.

As shown, supra, it is also provided in the second article of the deed that—

> "ANY SALE made as aforesaid shall be a PERPETUAL BAR, both at law and in equity, against the American Ice Company, and all persons claiming by, through, or under it from claiming the property, rights, interest, and franchises SO SOLD or any interest therein" (Rec. 16).

The substantial purpose, therefore, of any proceedings by the trustee for possession, no matter in what forum or by what particular form of suit, could only be to foreclose the mortgage and divest the title of the grantor.

This proceeding was, in effect, a foreclosure of the mortgage, having for its purpose the satisfaction of the debt due to the bondholders, by means of the extinction of all right, title and interest in the mortgagor, and the transfer of that title to the purchaser. It has already been shown that no right of possession in the trustee exists under the deed except upon default in payment of the mortgage debt, and even then the right of possession is only for the purposes of sale (Rec. 15).

If the trustee was competent to exercise in this District functions of a fiduciary character in the administration of this trust, which is denied, it could do so in but two ways:

First, acting under the terms of the deed in pais it could sell the property, and upon compliance with the terms of sale, convey the title to the purchaser, or,

Second, it could, through the aid of judicial proceedings, foreclose the mortgage in a court of equity. This is not only a remedy which was undeniably open to the bondholders, but was expressly permitted by the terms of the deed. The third article provides (Rec. 16):

> "The foregoing provision for a sale under the power aforesaid is cumulative with the ordinary remedy of foreclosure by entry or suit therefor, and the trustee hereunder may, upon default being made as aforesaid, institute and carry out proceedings to foreclose this mortgage or deed of trust by suit or otherwise, in such manner as may be authorized by law for the foreclosure of mortgages of real estate."

By the agreed statement it appears that the trustee has not acted in pais as contemplated in the second article of the deed, because it is there stated that—

> "the terms of said sale have not yet been complied with and no deed has been made to said purchasers, it being understood and agreed upon between the purchaser and the trustee at the time of said last mentioned sale that the said trustee should first obtain possession of said property" (Rec. 7).

Thus it appears that the possession sought in this proceeding is not the possession for the purpose of a sale under the second article of the trust, because according to the statement of facts that sale was already made, as it well might be, without first taking possession, while possession was not only unnecessary for the purposes of a sale made, but impossible for the purpose of a sale in Bangor. The property not being movable, possession could in no way aid the purposes of a sale in Bangor.

But whether it would facilitate such sale or not the trustee neither took nor attempted to take possession before the sale, but executed the power of sale without possession and after the sale sought, in this proceeding, to acquire possession, not for the purposes of a sale to be made, but for the purpose of confirming to the purchaser by legal proceedings any right which he might have in equity by reason of the sale.

If this proceeding before a justice of the peace is to be regarded as a proceeding wholly for and in behalf of the purchaser, it is utterly unauthorized by anything in the deed or in the law. The only proper course after a sale would be the conveyance to the purchaser leaving him to whatever remedies at law he might have for the enforcement of such rights as passed to him by virtue of the sale and conveyance.

If the proceeding, however, is to be treated as in aid of the execution of the trust, then it is, as before stated, an attempt at foreclosure by judicial aid under the general authority of all mortgagees, whether legal or equitable, to foreclose through judicial proceedings, and by virtue of the express stipulation in the third article of the deed. But that article provides that in the event of recourse to judicial proceedings they shall be prosecuted "in such manner as may be authorized by law for the foreclosure of mortgages of real estate."

In the absence of any express statutory provision this stipulation in the deed can have reference to no other than the old established and well known mode of procedure in equity.

III.

The Proceeding was one Wholly Without the Jurisdiction of a Justice of the Peace.

There is not any statute regulating foreclosure proceedings in this District, and Section 997 of the Revised Statutes relating to the District, not only does not confer on a justice of the peace any jurisdiction, either legal or equitable, for the foreclosure of a mortgage, but by its terms expressly excepts any such power from the jurisdiction granted, not only by the limitation upon the amount, which is restricted to one hundred dollars, but by the exception from jurisdiction of "cases involving the title to real estate."

A foreclosure proceeding, whatever may be the form, or at whatever stage in the attempted execution of the mortgage by the mortgagee or trustee under the mortgage deed, it may be resorted to, necessarily involves the title to real estate, and is therefore wholly without the power and jurisdiction of a justice of the peace in this District.

The defendant in error, in order to maintain an action for possession under this deed necessarily had to establish, first, a title to real estate and an indebtedness exceeding $35,000. It was absolutely essential to show the execution and validity of the mortgage and the title thereunder as against the defendants, the indebtedness claimed, and the default in payment, in order to make out a prima facie case in any court in any form of proceeding.

This at once puts the case out of the jurisdiction of a justice of the peace.

The first section of the Act of February 22, 1867 (14 St. 401), now Section 997 of the Revised Statutes of the United States relating to the District, defines the jurisdiction of justices of the peace in the following language:

> Sec. 997. Justices of the peace shall have jurisdiction in all civil cases where the amount claimed to be due for debt or damages arising out of contracts, > express or implied, or damages for wrongs or injuries to persons or property, does not exceed one hundred dollars, except in cases involving the title to real estate, actions to recover damages for assault, or assault and battery, or for malicious prosecution, or actions against justices of the peace or other officers for misconduct in office, or in actions for slander, verbal or written.

The justice's jurisdiction is confined to "civil cases where the amount claimed to be due" "does not exceed one hundred dollars." Here "the amount claimed to be due" exceeded thirty-five thousand dollars (Rec. 5).

It is no answer to say that in this action the defendant did not seek to recover that sum, because the statute does not refer to the recovery sought. It was a "civil case," in which the defendant in error sought judgment of the justice on the ground that there was due this large sum of money, and if that sum was not due, if that debt had been paid, there would have been no right, under the deed or under any other claim to have possession of the property.

Default in payment was the sole ground upon which possession was or could be claimed, and if the justice of the peace had found the debt to be paid, he would have been compelled to give judgment for the defendant, while, in order to give judgment for the plaintiff he was bound to adjudge that the debt of over thirty-five thousand dollars was due.

The stipulation of counsel in the Record (Rec. 4, 7), admitting the default was not filed in the proceedings before the justice of the peace, but only before the Supreme Court of the District, when it was agreed to try the case before the court without a jury and to dispense with formal proof, which defendant in error would otherwise have been compellable to offer before the court could have entered judgment.

It is therefore manifest that the justice of the peace could have and exercise no jurisdiction because "the amount claimed" and which he was compellable to find "to be due" was over thirty-five thousand dollars. This matter was necessarily put in issue and had to be proved before judgment for possession could be awarded by any court in any form of proceeding.

IV.

The Relation of Landlord and Tenant did not Exist, and the Case was not within the True Intent and Meaning of the Landlord and Tenant Act.

It is claimed by the defendant in error, however, that under the deed, by the default in payment of the debt and interest, the defendant as trustee, became ipso facto entitled to the possession of the property; that thereupon the grantor in the deed and those claiming under it became tenants at sufferance of the trustee, and upon giving the notice to quit of thirty days, the trustee acquired the right to proceed under the landlord and tenant act before a justice of the peace to recover that possession.

It was upon this theory that the defendant in error prevailed in the Court of Appeals, and this question is the most important one in the case, not only to the plaintiffs in error, but to the community generally, as it involves the application of that summary proceeding before a justice of the peace to a class of contracts of a very intricate nature, and of very great importance, and which ever since their origin, have been the peculiar subjects of administration in equity, not only for the purposes of private justice but as matter of public policy.

It is proper also to say at this point that though this Landlord and Tenant Act was passed by Congress in July, 1864, this present case is only the fifth attempt in thirty-three years, which has been made to apply the statute to this class of contracts. This fact alone must be very persuasive with the court that the appplication attempted to be given to this law has never been recognized as proper at the bar.

It is respectfully submitted that a careful examination of the statute and of the numerous decisions in the various States, in which similar statutes have been passed by the legislatures and applied by the courts, must satisfy this court that the extension of the remedies provided by that statute to cases of this character is wholly without validity, against reason, and against the plain intent and purpose of Congress in passing the act.

The Landlord and Tenants Act of the District of Columbia.

That act which is now Chapter 19 of the Revised Statutes relating to the District (Sections 680 to 690 inclusive), was originally Chapter 243 of the Statutes at Large (13 Stats. 383–384) and was entitled "An act to regulate proceedings in cases between landlord and tenants in the District of Columbia," while the caption given to it in the revision is simply "Landlord and Tenant."

The meaning or force of a legislative act is not to be defeated by reference to the title, but the title is part of the act and is a proper item of consideration in getting at the intent of the legislature.

Chief Justice Marshall, in Fisher vs. Blight, 2 Cr. 386, in construing an act of Congress, says:

> "The first part which has been resorted to is the title. On the influence which the title ought to have in construing the enacting clauses, much has been said; and, yet, it is not easy to discern the point of difference between the opposing counsel in this respect. Neither party contends that the title of an act can control plain words in the body of the statute and neither denies that, taken with other parts, it may assist in removing ambiguities. Where the intent is plain, nothing is left to construction. Where the mind labors to discover the design of the legislature, it seizes everything from which aid can be > derived; and in such case the title claims a degree of notice and will have its due share of consideration."

In United States vs. Palmer, 3 Wheat. 631, Chief Justice Marshall, again discussing the question of the force which the title of an act has in construing the act itself, says:

> "The title of an act cannot control its words, but may furnish some aid of what was in the mind of the legislature. The title of this act is 'An act for the punishment of certain crimes against the United States.' It would seem offenses against the United States, not offenses against the human race, were the crimes which the legislature intended by this law to punish."

The first section of the revision (677) abolishes the right of distress by the landlord (Act 1867, 14 Stat. 404).

The second section (678) creates a tacit lien upon the tenant's chattels on the premises in favor of the landlord (Ibid).

The third section (679) prescribes the mode of enforcement of the lien (Ibid).

All the following sections are from the Act of 1864 (13 Stat. 383), with scarcely any verbal change:

The fourth section (680) is as follows:

> "A tenancy at will shall not arise or be created without an express contract or letting to that effect, and all occupation, possession or holding of any messuage or real estate without express contract or lease, or by such contract or lease, the terms of which have expired, shall be admitted and held to be tenancies by sufferance."

The fifth section (681) is as follows:

> "All estates at will and sufferance may be determined by a notice in writing to quit of thirty days delivered to the tenant in hand or to some person of proper age upon the premises, or in the absence of such tenant or person, then such notice may be served by affixing the same to a conspicuous part of the premises where it may be conveniently read."

The sixth section (682) excepts from the operation of the two preceding sections contracts made prior to the passage of the act.

The seventh section (683) provides that attornments by a tenant to a stranger shall be void, and shall not affect the rights of the landlord unless made with his consent.

The eighth section (684) is as follows:

"When forcible entry is made, or when a peaceable entry is made and the possession unlawfully held by force, or when possession is held without right after the estate is determined by the terms of the lease by its own limitation, or by notice to quit, or otherwise, on written complaint on oath of the person entitled to the premises to a justice of the peace charging such forcible entry or detainer of real estate, a summons may be issued to a proper officer, commanding the person complained of to appear and show cause why judgment should not be rendered against him."

The ninth section (685) provides that—

"The summons shall be served at least seven days before the appearance of the party complained of."

The tenth section (686) provides for the judgment.

The eleventh section (687) is as follows:

"If, upon trial, defendant pleads title to the premises in himself, or in another person under whom he claims the premises, he shall recognize in a reasonable sum to the complainant, to be fixed by said justice, with sufficient sureties, conditioned to pay all intervening damages and costs and reasonable intervening rent for the premises; and the complainant shall in like manner recognize to the defendant conditioned to enter the suit at the next term of the Supreme Court of the District, and pay > all costs adjudged against him; and thereupon the proceedings shall be certified to said court by the justice. If either party neglects so to recognize, judgment shall be rendered against him as on nonsuit or default, and execution shall issue accordingly."

Chief Justice Marshall in the case of Blight vs. Fisher before referred to (2 Cr. 387) in discussing the provisions of the act then under consideration, says:

> "Wherever general words have been used in these sections they are restrained by the subject to which they relate, and by other words frequently in the same sentence, to particular objects, so as to make it apparent that they were employed by the legislature in a limited sense."

All of this act relates to a particular subject—all of its language is restrained by that subject.

Thus, in the first section, the right of distraint for rent in arrear could only apply to the conventional relation of landlord and tenant. The substitute therefor, the tacit lien in favor of the landlord conferred in the second section, and the provisions for its enforcement in the third section could only apply to that same relation. So, in the fourth section, the terms "tenancy at will" and the word "lease" in connection with, and apparently used synonomously with the word "contract," obviously apply to the conventional relation of landlord and tenant. The notice to quit provided for in the fifth section is appropriate only to the relation of landlord and tenant, and so the attornment of a tenant mentioned in the seventh section is meaningless without reference to that particular relation; while the eighth section (684), in so far as it does not relate to forcible entry and detainer, is confined strictly by its terms to the conventional relation of landland and tenant by lease of the premises, because the language is—

> "when possession is held without right after the estate is determined by the terms of the lease by its own limitation, or by notice to quit, or otherwise."

Thus it will be seen that the language used and all the provisions made in this act are entirely consistent and in harmony with the purpose declared both in the title of the original act, namely: "To regulate proceedings in cases between landlord and tenants," and in the general caption "Landlord and Tenant" given to it in the revision. And there is not to be found anywhere within the language of the statute a phrase, expression, or word which indicates an intent on the part of Congress to extend the operation of the statute to any other relation (except in the case of forcible entry or detainer), than the conventional one of landlord and tenant.

To extend it beyond that relation and to cases of adverse possession by others than the actual tenant or those claiming under him, it is submitted is wholly without warrant.

If this act is not to be restricted to the conventional relation of landlord and tenant, but is to be construed according to the broadest effect which can be given to its language it would dispense with, and in effect, abolish, the action of ejectment, because by Section 680, it is provided that—

> "All occupation, possession or holding of any messuage or real estate without express contract or lease . . . shall be admitted and held to be tenancies by sufferance."

While the succeeding section, 681, provides that—

> "All estates at will or sufferance may be determined by a notice in writing to quit of thirty days."

Yet this court has affirmatively decided in ruling upon the Revised Statutes of the United States relating to the District of Columbia that the action of ejectment is not abolished in this District.

Hogan vs. Kurtz, 94 U. S. 775.

It is submitted that nothing can be found in the language of this statute which would extend it to the case at bar, which would not equally extend it to any of the adverse occupations of real estate without contract for which the original action of ejectment would be the proper remedy.

But there is to be found in the words of the statute by which justices of the peace are created and their jurisdiction defined, express limitation which necessarily confines the operation of this statute to cases where the conventional relation of landlord and tenant exists, for, by Section 997, of the Revision, quoted supra, there is expressly reserved from their jurisdiction cases "involving the title to real estate."

It is perfectly obvious that all controversies as to "occupation, possession or holding of any messuage or real estate without express contract" would necessarily "involve the title to real estate;" except "in cases between landlords and tenants," which are the only ones which do not "involve title to real estate;" and this is so for the reason that in controversies between the landlord and tenant, the landlord is not required to prove any title, because the tenant is not permitted to deny it, except where he undertakes to show that since the tenancy he himself has acquired the title, or the title of the landlord has determined. To provide for this situation arising in "proceedings in cases between landlords and tenants," and to preserve the exception from the jurisdiction of the justice of the peace, it is provided by Section 687, quoted supra, that—

> "If the defendant pleads title in himself or in another through whom he claims the case shall not be tried by the justice, but shall be certified to the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia."

The serious consequences of extending the application of this statute to any other cases than the conventional relation of landlord and tenant are too obvious to require enumeration; and while the consequences which would ensue from the application of the statute, cannot be urged to defeat its plain meaning, they are entitled to be considered and are of great force where the meaning of the statute is not clear, or when it is sought to extend its provisions to cases to which it is not plainly applicable.

As said by Chief Justice Marshall, in Fisher vs. Blight, 2 Cr. 390:

> "Where rights are infringed, where fundamental principles are overthrown, where the general system of the law is departed from, the legislative intention must be expressed with irresistible clearness to induce a court of justice to suppose a design to effect such objects."

As already stated, in the thirty-three years that this statute has been in force in the District of Columbia, only five instances of its attempted application to other than the conventional relation of landlord and tenant can be found.

Decisions in the District of Columbia.

The earliest decision of the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia upon this question is that of Spalding vs. Hall, 6 D. C. Rep. 123 (1864). In that case the court say (p. 129):

> "If this language be understood in its broadest acceptation, it would seem to imply that any one who had a legal title to the premises held by the tenant might institute this summary proceeding to recover possession, whether that title was derived from the actual landlord or from some other source. Obviously, that cannot be the intent and meaning of this language; for if so it would at once subvert the common law action of ejectment, and substitute this summary proceeding in its place. The use of the words 'persons entitled to the premises' instead of the word 'landlord,' as in the first section, evinces an intention on the part of the legislature to extend this summary remedy beyond the actual lessor or landlord.
> "The true intent and meaning of the legislature was (I think) to extend this remedy to all persons who

by the act of lessor or by operation of law, are placed in the same relations to the tenant as the original lessor, to wit, the grantees or assignees, devisees and heirs-at-law of the lessor.

"If this construction of the statute be the true one, it follows that these complainants cannot institute this summary proceedings against the defendants in this case. They are not grantees, devisees, or heirs-at-law of the lessor of the premises in dispute. They certainly are not the landlords of these defendants. Before the expiration of the term of the tenants now holding over, the plaintiffs or complainants obtained from Mrs. Scott, the lessor of the defendants, a lease of the premises for the term of five years, to commence at the expiration of the defendants' tenancy. No relation, therefore, of landlord and tenant ever subsisted between these parties by express contract or by implication of law. This exposition of the statute will confine its provisions to what is its declared purpose, viz., to regulate proceedings in cases between landlord and tenant."

The first departure from this ruling occurs in the decision in the case of Luchs vs. Jones, 1 MacA. 345 (1874).

But as appears from the report the question was not involved in the disposition of the case, and what was said was, therefore, a mere obiter. Indeed if dicta can have degrees of weight, the dicta in this case were of the least weight, because the court held that it had no jurisdiction of the case, the conclusion of the opinion being "Let the appeal be dismissed for want of jurisdiction," p. 349.

The next case is that of Fiske vs. Bigelow, 2 MacA. 427, (1876) in which the decision was rendered by the same justice who decided Luchs vs. Jones, and though the question of jurisdiction is not noticed there and the court appears to have taken jurisdiction and decided the case, it was precisely the case of which he had, in 1 MacA., declared that they had no jurisdiction. Upon an examination of that case it will be found, first, that the question of jurisdiction was not raised and decided, and, secondly, that the question of the application of this statute to the case before the court was not raised by counsel on either side, and is not decided by the court in its opinion.

The next case, Barber vs. Harris, 6 Mack. 586 (1888), subsequently affirmed in this court in 129 U. S. 366, arose upon certiorari, and as appears by the decision of Mr. Justice Merrick, and by the decision of this court, the question was not and could not be presented in that form.

Mr. Justice Merrick says (p. 594):

> "The petition before the justice sets forth the relation of landlord and tenant, and that the justice assumed jurisdiction and acted upon the case as made. Now what may have occurred in proof we do not and cannot know upon an application for certiorari."

And then further, after stating the recitals of the complaint, the justice adds:

> "We are of opinion that these averments constitute fully a statement of the relation of landlord and tenant between the parties. Now whether the proofs came up to these averments or not cannot be inquired into upon a writ of certiorari. Certiorari goes only to the jurisdiction."

In the opinion in this court (129 U. S. 369) Mr. Justice Gray, stating the contents of the petition for the writ of certiorari, says:

> "But the petition for the writ of certiorari, alleges upon the oath of the petitioner, that he is in possession of the premises under a lease having nearly a year to run, with the privilege of extension for four years more.

Thus it appears that according to the petitioner's own statement he disclosed that the conventional relation of landlord and tenant did exist in that case, and the question of the proper construction and application of the statute was neither decided nor considered, because as stated by the court below, and approved by this court, the facts upon which the suit was founded were not open to inquiry upon certiorari.

It may well be that the proceedings in certiorari, instead of an appeal, were prosecuted in that case, because of the previous rulings of the court that no appeal would lie to the General Term from a decision at special term, upon an appeal from a justice of the peace, as had been held in Luchs vs. Jones, supra.

The next case is that of Jennings vs. Webb, 20 D. C. 317 (1892), heard by Justices Hagner, Cox and James, in which the court, through Mr. Justice Cox, referring to the proceedings under the Landlord and Tenant Act, say:

> "In this proceeding, unless he establishes the relation of landlord and tenant between himself and the defendant, no matter what the form of the declaration is, he is not entitled to recover. I have always held that at special term, and that is the opinion we entertain now. It is still a landlord and tenant proceeding."

From this review of the decisions it becomes apparent to the court that there is no authoritative decision in this jurisdiction in support of the position of the defendant in error, except in the case of Loring vs. Bartlett, 4 App. Cases D. C. 1 (1894).

The Deed of Trust did not Create the Grantor a Tenant, or Make the Grantee his Landlord.

The theory upon which the decision of Loring and Bartlett rests is that by the terms of the trust deed, the right of possession passed with the title to the trustees, and that the reservation of the right of possession in the grantor operated as a re-demise to the grantor by the grantee of a term in the land, which term expired upon default in the payment of the debt, and by force of the statute the grantor thereby became the tenant at sufferance of the purchaser at the trustee's sale.

This position of the Court of Appeals, irrespective of the construction of the Landlord and Tenant Act is against the weight of authority.

Thus in Hastings vs. Pratt, 8 Cush. 123, Chief Justice Shaw says:

> "Although in a loose sense a mortgagor in possession is said to be tenant at will of the mortgagee, yet he is not within the reason or the letter of the Revised Statutes, Chap. 104, Sec. 2. He is not a lessee, or holding under a lessee, or holding the demised premises without right after the determination of the lease."

So in MacCombs vs. Wallace, 66 N. C. 483, the court says:

> "In this case the possession of the defendant was not acquired either from the trustee or the plaintiff. There was nothing which can be called a demise. His possession arose out of his own title and continued until the sale by virtue of the reservation in the in trust to that (sic). His term has not expired. He had no term for that implies a term derived from some other person."

In a similar case, Burford vs. Nolan, 30 Miss. 428, where the land had been sold under a deed of trust containing similar privisions, the court said:

> "To sustain a proceeding of unlawful detainer under this statute the defendant must have entered into possession under the plaintiff, and must continue so to hold possession in violation of the contract of the parties. There is no pretense for saying that the defendant in this case entered into possession under the plaintiff, and he is not, therefore, entitled to this summary remedy."

In Simms vs. Humphrey, 4 Denio, 185, where the same contention was made, Bronson, Chief Justice, said:

> "It is said that the clause in the deed to Simms in relation to the possession of the property until the first of April constituted him a tenant for part of a year, and after the day had passed he was the tenant at sufferance and so subject to removal by this summary proceeding. But the clause in question could only operate by way of exception. The possession from the date of the deed to the first of April was not granted. Simms held during that period by virtue of his ORIGINAL TITLE and not under any grant OR DEMISE from Humphrey."

In Davis vs. Hemenway, 27 Vt. 589, the court, in speaking of the relation of mortgagor and mortgagee, says:

> "For the former (the mortgagor) is in equity the owner of the land and the interest of the mortgagee is a mere chattel, and a purchaser even after a failure to perform his contract strictly in time has still an equity. And although the mortgagor after the law day has passed and a purchaser after failure to perform hold by a tenure which has been denominated a kind of tenancy by sufferance, still they are neither of them in any sense lessees."

So, in this court, in the case of Burnett vs. Caldwell, 9 Wall. 293, Mr. Justice Swayne, speaking of the relation between vendor and vendee, before payment of purchase money, says:

> "If the contract in such cases be silent as to possession by the vendee, he is not entitled to it. If the contract stipulates for possession by the vendee, or the vendor puts him in possession, he holds as a licensee. The relation of landlord and tenant does not subsist between the parties. The characteristic feature of that relation is wanting."

It will thus be seen that the authorities generally hold that a grant of property in fee, reserving to the owner who never parts with the possession, the right of possession, does not make him derive any right of possession from his grantee.

Especially must this be so where the reservation is in the terms employed in the deed in this case.

By that clause the grantor is not only permitted to remain in possession and to receive the rents, issues and profits, but he is to do so "In the same manner, to the same extent and WITH THE SAME EFFECT AS IF THIS DEED HAD NOT BEEN MADE" (Rec. 15).

So that the court will see that in this case the grantor reserved to itself, not by virtue of any demise from the grantee, but by virtue of its original title in fee simple the right to this possession, in the same manner that it had it, to the same extent that it had it, and with the same effect that it had it, as though no deed had ever been made. The manner of its possession and the extent of its possession were such as resulted from its ownership in fee, and the legal effect of that possession, made its title and possession still allodial, holding under no superior and being the tenant of no one.

It is, therefore, apparent to the court that even if the principle of a redemise could have been rightfully applied to the case of Loring vs. Bartlett, it could have no possible application to the deed in this case.

The Conventional Relation of Landlord and Tenant Must Exist to Bring a Case Within the True Intent and Meaning of Landlord and Tenant Statutes.

The statute in question is not a novelty in this country. Statutes similar in their general terms have been passed in nearly all, if not all, of the States of the Union, and counsel confidently challenge the counsel for the defendant in error to produce a single authoritative decision of any court in the United States, other than the case of Loring vs. Bartlett, in the Court of Appeals of this District, extending the application of statutes, similar to this, to any other cases than those where the conventional relation of landlord and tenant subsisted.

As will be shown infra decisions throughout the United States on similar statutes have been so numerous and so harmonious that it may justly be said that the rule is universal that statutes of this description do not extend to cases in which the conventional relation of landlord and tenant does not exist.

Assuming that some sort of tenancy might be said to exist by virtue of this deed, it is still insisted that the Landlord and Tenant Act can have no application to the case. That question must be determined upon the words of the statute and the intent of Congress. Congress is presumed not to have been ignorant of the fact that from their adoption to the time of the passage of this statute, similar statutes passed in the various States had received judicial construction, and if it had been the intent of Congress to give to this act the far reaching effects and consequences which are claimed for it, it would not have passed a statute similar in its general purport to those which had already throughout the several States been construed to apply only to the conventional relation of landlord and tenant.

The decisions of the Supreme Judicial Court of Massachusetts quoted below are uniform in excluding from the operation of the Landlord and Tenant Statute cases like the present. And it is probably because of those decisions that in the statute of 1882 the words "or when a mortgage of real estate has been foreclosed by a sale under a power contained therein or otherwise," were introduced.

The Massachusetts Statute (Mass. Pub. Stat., 1882, C. 175) reads as follows:

> "Sec. 1. When a forcible entry into lands or tenements has been made, or when a peaceable entry has been made and the possession is unlawfully held by force, when the lessee of lands or tenements or a person holding under such lessee, holds possession > without right, after the determination of a lease by its own limitation, by notice to quit, or otherwise, or when a mortgage of real estate has been foreclosed by a sale under a power contained therein, or otherwise, the person entitled to the premises may recover possession thereof, in the manner hereinafter provided."

Turning now to the decisions in the State courts, they will be found uniformly to hold that statutes of this character not containing the words above italicised are inapplicable to any other situation than where the conventional relation of landlord and tenants exists.

Womack vs. Powers, 50 Ala. 5.

> "Appellees assert title to the premises under a purchase at a sale made by a trustee under a deed of trust to secure the payment of a debt, executed by the husband of one and the ancestor of the other appellant. . . . The appellees never having had actual possession of the premises cannot maintain the action of unlawful detainer. Actual possession, not constructive possession imputed by law for many purposes to the title, is necessary to maintain that action. Otherwise, in the progress of the suit a controversy as to the title which the statute forbids would inevitably arise. Dumas vs. Hunter, 25 Ala. 711. Russell vs. Desplous, 29 Ala. 308."

Steiner vs. Priddy, 28 Ill. 180.

> "There was no jurisdiction in the justice of the peace in this cause to evict the party. That could only be done by an ejectment. One of two things must exist to give jurisdiction in an action of forcible entry and detainer or forcible entry. There must be either a forcible entry, or the relation of landlord and tenant must exist."

West vs. Frederick, 62 Ill. 192.

In this case Frederick loaned a sum of money and took an absolute deed, instead of a mortgage, giving back a contract to reconvey upon the payment of the sum loaned within one year. The money not being paid at maturity Frederick brought his action of forcible detainer.

The court said:

> "This position is untenable. These parties are not vendor and vendee, and the defendant has not obtained possession of the land under a contract with the plaintiff. In two particulars the case is beyond the reach of the statute. It is stated by the plaintiff himself in his testimony that these instruments were executed merely as security for the loan of money. But even if the proof on this point were less conclusive the fact that the defendant did not derive his possession from the plaintiff would of itself be fatal to this action."

In Read vs. Elwell, 42 Maine, 270, and Sawyer vs. Hanson, 24 Me. 542, proceedings for forcible entry and detainer under a similar statute were brought against the mortgagor, founded upon a sale of the mortgaged premises for default in payment of the debt. In both of these cases the court held that the action would not lie.

In Sawyer vs. Hanson, the court said:

> "To bring the case within the fifth section the relation of landlord and tenant must be shown to have existed and the lease to have terminated and the holding over by the lessee. The language clearly imports that the process under this part of the statute shall be in favor of a lessor or his assignee against a lessee, or one holding under him. The determination of the estate referred to may be of a lease for years or where a tenancy at will existed; it was not intended for those cases where the title could be contested" (pp. 544–545).

Short vs. Bridwell, 15 Ind. 211.

> "The appellants contend that the justice had jurisdiction under the provisions of 2 R. S. 1852, Chap. 4, p. 490.
> "Under this statute the relation of landlord and tenant must exist between the parties, or the defend> ant must have made unlawful or forcible entry into the land, and either peaceably or forcibly detained the same; or having peaceably obtained the possession he must unlawfully and forcibly keep the same; otherwise the justice has no jurisdiction."

In MacCombs vs. Wallace, 66 N. Carolina, 482–3.

This was an action before a justice of the peace under the North Carolina statute. The defendant had executed a deed of trust to the plaintiff providing for a sale of the land if the debt was not paid, and also providing as follows:

> "It is further the understanding and agreement of the parties that the said party of the first part (the defendant) shall retain possession of the said premises until the same shall be sold by the said party of the second part."

The trustee sold the property under the deed of trust to the plaintiff who brought the action before a justice of the peace under the Landlord and Tenant Act. The court held:

> "Upon a careful consideration of this act we think it was intended only to apply to a case in which the tenant entered into the possession under some contract, either actual or implied, with the supposed landlord, or with some person under whom the supposed landlord claimed in privity, or when the tenant himself was in privity with some person who who had so entered.
> "This construction would exclude two classes of cases, which we think were not intended to be embraced in the act, viz.: Vendees entering into possession under a contract of purchase, and vendors continuing in possession under circumstances like the present. Such persons are certainly tenants at will or sufferance for many purposes and they are frequently so called. Jones vs. Hitt, 64 N. C. 198. But they seem to be excluded as well by the words of the section above cited, as by the general scope and spirit of the act. The words of the section > clearly require that an entry should be made under a demise of some sort, although there is no reason for saying that it must be for any definite term; it may well be at will.

> "In this case the possession of the defendant was not acquired from either the trustee or the plaintiff; there was nothing which can be called a demise; his possession arose out of his own title and continued until the sale by virtue of the reservation in the in trust to that (sic). His term has not expired; he had no term, for that implies a term derived from some other person."

In the case of Hastings vs. Pratt, 8 Cushing, 121–2–3, the mortgagee attempted to obtain possession under a summary proceeding under the Landlord and Tenant Statute. Chief Justice Shaw, in rendering the decision of the court, said:

> "The present statute contemplates three cases in which this process will lie. One, forcible entry; two forcible detainer; three, a tenant holding against his landlord either (1) after the determination of a lease by its own limitation, or (2) after the expiration of a notice to quit duly given, or (3) after a notice of fourteen days for nonpayment of rent. Rev. St., Chap. 104; Statutes of 1847, Chap. 267. See Fifty Associates vs. Howland, 11 Met. 99. . . . Although in a loose sense a mortgagor in possession is said to be tenant at will of the mortgagee, yet he is not within the reason of the letter of the Revised Statutes, Chap. 104, Sec. 2. He is not a lessee or holding under a lessee or holding the demised premises without right after the determination of the lease. The remedies of a mortgagee are altogether of a different character clearly marked out by law. Upon the facts, the court are of opinion, that the plaintiff's case is not within the statute and that the defendant is entitled to judgment."

In the case of Boyle vs. Boyle, 121 Mass. 85, the same question arose and again in the case of Woodside vs. Ridgway, 126 Mass. 292. In both cases Mr. Justice Morton delivers very full opinions, reviewing the previous decisions in the Supreme Judicial Court of Massachusetts, and also the history of the statute.

In the case of Boyle vs. Boyle the learned judge says:

> "We find no case in which it has been held that the mortgagee or other grantee not in possession can maintain this process for the purpose of obtaining possession." . . .

And again, he says:

> "It was not intended by this summary process before a justice of the peace to try questions of the title to real estate, but to give a speedy remedy to those who, being in possession of the land, are unlawfully dispossessed by a strong hand. Similar statutes in other States have received a like construction. The plaintiff, therefore, cannot maintain this action as assignee of the mortgagee and for the same reason he cannot maintain it if he has acquired a title to the estate under a sale by virtue of the power contained in the mortgage."

In Leavitt vs. Wallace, 12 N. H. 493, the court, Parker, Chief Justice, says:

> "But the Act of July 1, 1831, providing further remedies for landlords and tenants in confined to these cases where there has been a tenancy, and is not to be applied to cases where the occupant holds adversely, and the relation of landlord and tenant has never existed. The title of the act indicates this. And the language in several places in the act itself shows that this is the true construction of it.
> "As it appears here that no tenancy had ever existed on the part of the respondent under the title set up by the complainant, this proceeding cannot be sustained notwithstanding the disclaimer."

In the case of the C., B. & Q. Road vs. Skupa, 16 Neb. 341, the defendant had purchased a parcel of land and entered into a contract for the deferred purchase money in which it was provided that in the event of nonpayment of the deferred purchase money, the right of possession and all equitable and legal interest in the premises should revert and revest in the vendor, and it also contained this stipulation:

> "And the party of the second part covenants and agrees that if he is allowed to remain in possession of the land after default he shall hold his possession as tenant at will of the party of the first part."

The court, Reese, justice, after setting forth the provisions of the statute of Nebraska, says:

> "We have quoted these sections of the statute at length for the purpose of showing in what cases and under what conditions a justice has 'power to inquire' into the unlawful detention of property. . . . This contract is a contract of sale and not a lease. It must be one or the other. It cannot be said that if the purchaser fails to pay an installment of purchase money at the time it is due, the vendor cannot enforce the contract against him; that it then becomes a lease and so continues until the purchaser pays the installment due; and that such payment again changes it into a contract of sale."

The court further says:

> "So long as the contract of sale continues so long has the purchaser an interest in the subject of the contract. So long as that interest or title exists the justice has no jurisdiction in the case. In an action in ejectment or other proper proceeding in a court of general jurisdiction, all equities and defenses can be fully adjudicated. In justice's court that cannot be done for the reason that no jurisdiction or authority to do so exists, and, therefore, in suits between vendor and vendee growing out of the contract of sale the district court only has jurisdiction."

In Burford vs. Nolan, 30 Miss. 427–428, which was a case of unlawful detainer under the statute before a justice of the peace, the court thus states the case and applies the law:

> "Nolan executed a deed of trust to secure certain debts therein named upon a tract of land, being at the time in possession of the same, and making default in payment the land was sold by the trustee when Burford became the purchaser. Did the plaintiff pursue the proper remedy to gain possession of the land? We cannot look beyond the letter of the statute with a view of furnishing an answer to this question; for to enable the plaintiff to succeed he must bring himself clearly within the rule which applies to all special or statutory jurisdiction."
> "The statute is in these words: 'If any person shall enter or shall have entered in a peaceable manner into any lands or tenements in cases where such entry is lawful, and after the expiration of his right shall continue to hold the same against the consent of the party entitled to the possession,'" etc.
> "To sustain the proceeding of unlawful detainer under this statute, the defendant must have entered into possession under the plaintiff and must continue so to hold possession in violation of the contract of the parties. There is no pretense for saying that the defendant in this case entered into possession under the plaintiff and he is not, therefore, entitled to this summary remedy."

In Roach vs. Cosine, 9 Wend. 232, Savage, Chief Justice, in applying the New York Statute, says:

> "It cannot be contended that the statute under which these proceedings were had was intended to afford an expeditious mode of foreclosing a mortgage. It was intended to apply to the cases of landlord and tenant strictly and the other cases specified. It has often been said that the mortgagor after forfeiture is quasi tenant of the mortgagee; but he is so only for the purpose of receiving notice to quit. 18 Johns.

> R. 488; 6 Cow. 148, and cases there cited. He is not that kind of tenant, who is to be dispossessed in the summary manner contemplated by this statute."

In People vs. Simpson, 28 N. Y. 56, Marvin, Justice, after referring to the terms of the Statute of New York, says:

> "By the construction given to the statute it must appear that the relation of landlord and tenant existed by agreement and not by mere operation of law; that the relation was conventional."

And Selden, Justice, in the same case, says, p. 58:

> "It has often been decided that to authorize such proceedings the conventional relation of landlord and tenant must be shown to exist and not a tenancy created by the mere operation of law."

In Simms vs. Humphrey, 4 Denio, 185, the defendant had sold the premises to the plaintiff and in the deed was a stipulation: "Possession of said premises to be retained by the said party of the first part until April 1, 1844."

The action was brought before a justice of the peace under the Landlord and Tenant Act against the defendant for holding over. The court by Bronson, Chief Justice, after pointing out that the statute applied only to the conventional relation of landlord and tenant, said, page 188:

> "It is said that the clause in the deed of Simms in relation to the possession of the property until the first of April constituted him a tenant for part of a year, and after the day had passed he was a tenant at sufferance, and so subject to removal by this summary proceeding. But the clause in question could only operate by way of exception. The possession from the date of the deed to the first of April was not granted. Simms held during that period by virtue of his original title and not under any grant or demise from Humphrey. After the first of April it was the case of a grantor in possession after he had > parted with all his original title. If that made him a tenant at sufferance to the grantee, still as the relation of lessor and lessee had never existed between the parties, the case did not come within the statute. We think the justice had no jurisdiction."

In Davis vs. Hemenway, 27 Vt. 589, the equitable mortgagee brought forcible entry and detainer against the defendant, the mortgagor. Redfield, Chief Justice, in delivering the opinion of the court held:

> "In regard to the extent of this remedy it is obvious to us that under the fifteenth section which expressly limits the remedy to a written lease and a demand in writing after the determination of the lease for the surrender of the premises, or the twenty-third or thirtieth sections which only extend to 'the lessee of lands,' 'or the person holding under such lessee,' could have no just application to the case of an equitable mortgagee and probably not even to the case of a purchaser of the land in possession. For the former is in equity, the owner of the land, and the interest of the mortgagee is a mere chattel, and a purchaser even after a failure to perform his contract strictly in time has still an equity. And although the mortgagor after the law day has passed and a purchaser after failure to perform, held by a tenure which has been denominated a kind of tenancy by sufferance, still they are neither of them in any sense lessees.

In Steele vs. Bond, 28 Minn. 267, an action was brought under the Minnesota Landlord and Tenant Statute, founded upon a lease which the defendant claimed was in reality a mortgage, but as to which the defendant was in default.

Clark, Justice, in delivering the opinion of the court, says:

> "The act concerning forcible entries and unlawful detainers so far as it affords a remedy for landlords against tenants who unlawfully detain the premises after a default in the payment of the rent, or the expiration of the term, must be construed as > similar acts have always been construed by the courts of other States, to apply only to the conventional relation of landlord and tenant. It was not intended as a substitute for the action of ejectment, nor to afford means of enforcing agreements to surrender possession of real estate where either the relation does not exist or has not existed. The foundation upon which the jurisdiction rests is that the tenant is in possession of the land in consequence and by virtue of that relation, and unlawfully withholds possession after a default in the performance of the terms upon which he entered, or after his term has expired. The complaint in this action states a case of that character and one in which the municipal court has full power to grant restitution. The answer sets up matters which control the legal effect of the laws on which the complaint is founded, and show, if true, that the relation of landlord and tenant was not created by it and does not exist between the parties. This is a good defense to the action if established" (p. 273).

In Ainslee vs. Howlett, 76 N. Y. 574, where the defendant claimed that the agreement between him and the plaintiff was a mortgage and not a lease, the court held that to be a sufficient defense to the proceeding under the Landlord and Tenant Act, and the court further held (p. 580):

> "The essential requisite to authorize these proceedings is that the conventional relation of landlord and tenant should exist."

In Evartson vs. Sutton, 5 Wend. 281, Savage, Chief Justice, delivering the opinion, says:

> "The statute under which these proceedings were had provides that where any tenant or lessee at will, or sufferance, or for part of a year, or one or more years, or from year to year, shall hold over after the expiration of his term, it shall be lawful for the landlord or lessor to make oath in writing to such holding over without permission, and thereupon to apply to a judge who shall issue a summons and take other proceedings pointed out in the statute ending in a warrant to deliver possession to the landlord or lessor. This statute is applicable between landlord and tenant only. No such relation existed between the plaintiff and Jerome, or between Jerome and Terry. The whole proceedings, therefore, from beginning to end have been without jurisdiction and void.

"The contract between the plaintiff and Jerome was set out in the affidavit upon which the proceedings were had putting the plaintiff in possession. It is a mere executory contract by which Jerome is considered the owner of the property, and he agrees to give possession at a certain day, and the use of the property he agrees shall be equivalent to the interest accumulating on the debt he owed the plaintiff. Now so far as analogy exists between this agreement and a lease it goes to show that the plaintiff was to set off the use of the property (or the rent) against the interest of his mortgages. Jerome in this transaction is most like a landlord, and the plaintiff a tenant; but in truth there is no pretense for anything like a tenancy. The judge might as well have undertaken to enforce any agreement for the purchase and sale of real estate. It is true indeed that for some purposes the mortgagor is considered the tenant to the mortgagee and the vendor of land who continues in possession after the sale under an agreement to deliver possession on a certain day is tenant to the purchaser. 4 John. R. 150. So, also, the same relation exists in other cases, 7 Cow. 323–6; but the statute of 1820 was clearly designed to afford a speedy remedy where the conventional relation of landlord and tenant existed and not where that relation is created by operation of law. The legislature never intended that a mortgagee should have a right to proceed under this statute to obtain possession of the mortgaged premises after forfeiture."

In Green vs. Wilbar, 72 N. C. 592–594, Pearson, Chief Justice, in delivering the opinion of the court, says:

> "The Landlord and Tenant Act does not apply to a mortgagor who is allowed to remain in possession until default in making payment, and on demand, after default, refuses to surrender possession; MacCombs vs. Wallace, 66 N. C. Rep. 481. The mortgagee cannot be let into possession by summary process before a justice of the peace, but has his remedy by action to foreclose, or by action to recover the land on his legal title, to which action the equitable title of the mortgagor may be interposed by way of counter claim."

In Johnson vs. Hauser, 82 N. C. 385, the defendant had agreed to purchase a piece of real estate and was put in possession by the vendors under an agreement that he would pay the balance of the purchase money at the end of twelve months or surrender up possession. The plaintiffs claimed that this made him a tenant and brought proceedings for possession under the Landlord and Tenant Act. The court by Ashe, Chief Justice, says:

> "The construction given to the Landlord and Tenant Act by several decisions of this court, is that it applies only to the relation of lessor and lessee when the latter holds over after the expiration of his term and when there is no other relation to complicate the question. But where one enters upon land under a contract of purchase he cannot be evicted therefrom by a summary proceeding under the act. Greer vs. Wilbar, 72 N. C. 592. Riley vs. Jordan, 75 N. C. 180. MacCombs vs. Wallace, 66 N. C. 481."

In Benjamin vs. Benjamin, 5 N. Y. 388, the court said:

> "To entitle a party to this summary remedy it must appear that the relation is a conventional one, created by agreement, not by mere operation of law. This is well settled. Evartson vs. Sutton, 5 Wend. 281; Roach vs. Cosine, 9 Wend. 227; Simms vs. Humphrey, 4 Denio, 186. The relation of landlord and > tenant does not necessarily exist in many cases where the legal ownership is in one person and the possession in another, although by the express compact of the parties. . . . If any other question than such as related to the tenancy and the holding over is to be litigated between the parties, recourse must be had to an action instead of this summary proceeding" (p. 388).

In Williams vs. Bigelow, 11 How. Pr. 88, the plaintiff agreed to sell certain property to the defendant, who was let into possession thereof, with the agreement that it would be conveyed to him when he had finished paying the purchase money. The defendant made default in his payments, and the plaintiff gave him a notice that he should consider the contract at an end. The defendant refused to pay the purchase money, but remained in possession and held over, but without the permission and against the will of the plaintiff. The court by Greene, Justice, held, page 88:

> "'On this state of facts there is not even a colorable pretence for treating Williams as the tenant of Bigelow, within the meaning of that term as used in the statute. These summary proceedings are given between those who stand in the conventional relation of landlord and tenant, and not those who become such by operation of law, except in the cases specially provided for and specified in the statute."

In Stockbridge vs. Nute, 20 N. H. 273, the court said:

> "The two hundred and ninth chapter of the Revised Statutes was provided for the relief of landlords against their tenants and is applicable only where the relation of landlord and tenant exists, or rather, having existed, has been dissolved by the expiration of the term or by some act or omission of the parties. By the process which the statute furnishes the title to the land cannot be drawn in question, the only inquiries being, did the relation of landlord and tenant ever exist between the parties? And has the right of the defendant acquired by that been lost?"

In People vs. Hovey, 4 Lansing, 89, the court say:

> "No rule of law is better settled than that the relation of landlord and tenant must be proved to exist between the persons seeking to remove another who is in possession, from premises, by summary proceedings under 3d Revised Statutes."

In Mitchell vs. Simpson, 14 Abb. Pr. 460, the court say

> "It (the Landlord and Tenant Act) was not intended and does not provide for the obtaining of possession of land in any case except those in which the relation of landlord and tenant exists, and applies to no one but a tenant."

CONCLUSION.

It is respectfully submitted that the judgment of the Court of Appeals should be reversed and this controversy should be left for settlement to a court of equity, to which properly belongs the superintendence of the trusts committed to the two trustees, and which has the power to preserve the legal and equitable rights of all the parties.

vs.

THE EASTERN TRUST AND BANKING COMPANY,
DEFENDANT IN ERROR.

BRIEF FOR DEFENDANT IN ERROR.

A statement of the case will be found in the brief for defendant in error in support of its motion to dismiss or affirm the case, and it is unnecessary to repeat it here.

The points of law raised by the record are:

1. Does the law prevailing in the District of Columbia permit the defendant to act as trustee, and to execute the trust conferred upon it by the deed of trust in controversy?

2. How does the omission of the Recorder of Deeds to copy the defendant's corporate seal upon his records, affect its right to recover?

3. Is the power of sale in the deed of trust void? If so, how does its invalidity affect the defendant's right to recover?

4. Was the defendant entitled to appeal to the Landlord and Tenant Act in force in the District of Columbia to obtain possession of the property in controversy prior to the sale, and if so, how was that right affected by the sale?

1. A charter of incorporation imparts to the body corporate individuality and personality. Within its scope, terms and provisions, the corporation may do whatever a natural person, acting in his legal capacity, might do. This faculty, thus created, it possesses and may exercise as certainly as may an individual, not only in the place of its creation, but elsewhere, unless forbidden by law or the policy of the foreign State.

> "Beyond, as well as in the limits of the domestic sovereignty, the only difference between a natural and an artificial person, as to the recognition of their personal existence, would be, that wherever the law creating the latter should be recognized, the existence of such a being would be legal only, while that of the other would be actual as well as legal; and this is the reason why, in the absence of any local law or policy to the contrary, the same code of comity will apply to both of them in the courts of all liberal and enlightened nations."
> Lathrop vs. The Commercial Bank of Scioto, 8 Dana, 114.
>
> Connecticut Mutual Life Insurance Co. vs. Cross et al., 18 Wis. 119.
> Cowell vs. Springs' Co., 100 U. S. 56.

The defendant's charter provides that it shall be possessed of all the powers, privileges, and immunities, and subject to all the duties and obligations conferred upon corporations by law, except as provided therein; it empowers the corporation inter alia, to hold by grant, assignment, transfer, devise or bequest, any real or personal property, or trust duly created, and to execute trusts of every description. Sections 1 and 3 (Record, p. 8). The power to act as trustee, and to execute the trusts created by the conveyance of December 2, 1889, is thus expressly conferred, and cannot be questioned in defendant's domicile. The charter does not forbid the defendant from acting in the quality of trustee or agent, or of exercising any of the powers conferred upon it, elsewhere than in Maine. An express authorization to exercise its chartered powers in a foreign State, would be simply nugatory. The right, privilege, or power sought to be exercised, is not strictly speaking, a franchise, but a right belonging to a corporation equally to an individual, and may be exercised here, unless some statute either distinctly forbids it, or indicates that such exercise is opposed to local public policy. The question is a legislative and not a judicial one. Said Chief Justice Christiancy in Thompson vs. Waters:

> "In ascertaining what the legislative policy is, we are to be guided not only by such express provisions as they have chosen to make and the natural implications from them, but also from silence which may furnish as clear an indication of what that policy was intended to be, as can be drawn from what they have expressed; since, if they have made no provision at all upon that particular subject or branch of the subject or question involved, they intended to adopt, and left the courts to apply, the generally received principles of comity, and to that extent to adopt the foreign law; and if they have chosen to leave the matter without any legislative provision, the case ought to be a very clear one indeed, which will authorize the courts to refuse such recognition on the ground that it would be prejudicial to the State."
> 25 Mich. 214.

There is no statutory inhibition or expression of legislative judgment that it is against the interests of the citizens of this jurisdiction to permit a foreign corporation from exercising the powers and discharging the duties imposed upon the defendant by the deed of trust under consideration,

2. The deed of trust to defendant was duly recorded and acknowledged. Its delivery passed the title to the grantee, in præsenti, and whether recorded or not, was good as against the grantor and his assigns without consideration. Were authorities needed to support a proposition so fundamental and well established, they are abundant.

The instrument is also good as to creditors and purchasers without notice and for valuable consideration. It was properly acknowledged, and was by law entitled to record.

Richardson's Supplement, Ch. 69, page 315 (Vol. 1).

The absence of the seal from the record may have in legal effect changed the character of the writing from a sealed to an unsealed instrument, as to parties having the right to rely upon the record, but it created a lien of record, of which parties dealing with the property were bound to take notice, equally as though no error had occurred in recording the deed of trust; much less can the plaintiffs, holding the title of the American Ice Company, and standing in its place with its rights not enlarged or qualified by the recording act, take advantage of the error.

3. A power of sale granted by a mortgagor on the creation of the mortgage does not conflict with the principles of equity embraced in the maxim "once a mortgage always a mortgage," or to the rules of equity as applied to mortgages. The object of a deed of trust is to secure a debt; to effect that purpose the power of sale must exist somewhere, either in express terms in the instrument itself, to be exercised as therein provided, or in some tribunal charged with the enforcement of such securities. A sale by the court is only a mode of applying the pledged property to the satisfaction of the debt. No other agent to make the sale being designated in the instrument creating the pledge, the exercise of the power by implication is referred to the courts, but it does not follow that it is not equally competent for the grantor by express language to designate some person or corporation to make it. No legal principle is thereby violated.

Said Chief Justice Gordon in Lawrence vs. The Farmers' Loan and Trust Co.:

> "The power to dispose of the property to satisfy the debt for which it is pledged is not collateral, but like the right of redemption, inheres in the subject. It is not an addition to the mortgage, but a part it, and the mode in which it may be exercised is as proper a subject of agreement prima facie, as the terms of the mortgage itself."
> 13 N. Y. 209.

Such a power is sustained by English and American authorities alike.

Croft vs. Powell, Comyn R. 603.
Sowder vs. Morgan, 18 Vesey, 344.
Nothie vs. Edwards, 2 Colger R. 465.
Davy vs. Durant, 1 DeG. & J. 335.
Montague vs. Davis, 12 Allen, 397.
Elliott vs. Wood, 45 N. Y. 71.

Whether this be or be not the correct view of the case, it is immaterial to determine. The question is not whether the power of sale contained in the deed of trust is valid or invalid, or the sale made thereunder is valid or void. The remedies at law and in equity of the cestuis que trust are concurrent. The adoption of the one does not exclude the other. Whether they are entitled to obtain possession through their trustee under the proceedings instituted in these causes depend upon the provisions of the deed of trust, and the laws of this jurisdiction. And this brings us to the principal question in the case.

4. The estate limited in the premises and habendum of the deed of trust is a fee. Both the limiting clauses contain apt and technical language to create that estate. The first article of the declaration of trust provides that—

> "the American Ice Company shall be permitted and suffered to possess, manage, develop, operate, and enjoy the plant and property herein conveyed, and intended so to be, and to take and use the income, rents, issues, and profits thereof in the same manner, to the same extent and with the same effect as if this deed had not been made," until default was made in the payment of the principle or interest on said bonds, or some of them, or in respect to some of the things to be done on the part and behalf of the grantor. The power to take possession and sell is found in the second of said articles, and is in the following language:

> "But if default shall be made by the said American Ice Company in the payment of said bonds or of any of them at the time they fall due and payable, or if said American Ice Company shall fail to pay said coupons or any of them according to the tenor thereof on the presentation and surrender of the same respectively, or if it shall fail faithfully to observe the requirements made of it by these presents, and such default shall continue for the space of ninety days, then the whole amount of the principal of said bonds, together with all accrued and unpaid interest thereon (unless such default be waived by the holders of the majority of the bonds then outstanding as hereinafter provided) shall be deemed immediately due and payable; and it shall be lawful for the trustee to enter into or upon the premises and property hereby granted or intended so to be, and to take possession of the whole or any part thereof, and > to sell and dispose of all and singular the premises, property, rights, interests, and franchises hereby conveyed or mortgaged, or intended so to be, or such portion as the trustee may deem necessary, at public auction in said Bangor upon such terms as to credit, partial credit, and security for payment as it may think proper or expedient, having first given public notice of the time and place of the sale or sales by advertisement printed not less than once a week for at least four successive weeks in one or more newspapers printed and published in said Bangor, and also in Washington aforesaid. The trustees shall have the right to adjourn such sale or sales from time to time in its discretion, giving reasonable notice of each adjournment, and after so adjourning to make the sale at the time and place to which the same may be adjourned; and no other notice or demand whatsoever to and upon the party of the first part shall be necessary."

This power of sale is expressly made cumulative with the ordinary remedy of foreclosure, by entry, suit or otherwise. The clause in the deed of trust, permitting the American Ice Company to retain possession of the property until default, is similar in language and identical in legal effect with the clause in the deed of trust considered and interpreted by this court in the recent case of Loring vs. Bartlett.

Chief Justice Alvey, speaking for the court, said:

> "The effect of the deed to the trustees was to vest the fee simple estate in them from the date of the deed, and but for the express provision or reservation in the deed which we have already recited, whereby the appellee was allowed to retain possession of the property until default, the right of possession would also have vested in the trustees from the date of the deed."
>
> 4 Appeal Cases D. C. 1.

If this be the law, then the right of the American Ice Company to the possession of the property embraced in the deed of trust terminated upon default in the payment of the bonds. That was one of the events upon the happening of which its right of possession was made to depend. The right of possession immediately accrued to the defendant, and the Landlord and Tenant Act furnished the proper remedy to enforce that right. In the case of Loring vs. Bartlett, supra, the purchaser from the trustee brought the suit. Here the trustee sues. In all other respects, the cases are similar in fact and identical in legal principle. In Loring vs. Bartlett the right of the purchaser from the trustees to sue was put upon the express ground that he held the trustees' title, and was substituted to their right by operation of law.

> "The property having been sold under the power in the deed after default made by the appellee, the purchaser became entitled to all of the rights vested in the trustees in regard to the possession of the premises, and is substituted to their rights in that respect by operation of law."

is the language of the court. It was because the trustees were entitled to the possession of the property that the purchaser from them became entitled.

The conclusion reached by the court in this case is fortified by numerous decisions. Wilkerson vs. Hall was an action for double rent under the Statute of 4th George II, also for use and occupation. The court held that the provision in a mortgage permitting the mortgagor to retain possession until default in payment of principal or interest, or any covenant therein contained, operated as a re-demise to the mortgagor, until a violation of the covenants in the mortgage contained.

Justice Vaughn, in disposing of the case, said :

> "In modern times it has been usual to insert these special provisions in mortgage deeds, and the effect of this is to give the mortgagor complete control over the property as tenant for years to the mortgagee."
> 3d. Bing. (N. C.) 508.

The case of Fisher vs. Giles, was an action of ejectment brought by the mortgagee against the mortgagor after default. The mortgage contained a clause permitting the mortgagee to enter upon the mortgaged premises upon default by the mortgagor in the performance of certain covenants set out in the mortgage. No notice to quit was served.

Chief Justice Best said:

> "We must look at the covenant he made with the mortgagee to ascertain what his real situation is. We find from the deed between the parties, that the possession of his estate is secured to him until a certain day, and then if he does not redeem his pledge by that day, the mortgagee has the right to enter and take possession. From that day the possession belongs to the mortgagee, and there is no more occasion for his requiring that the estate should be delivered up to him before he brings an ejectment, than for a lessor to demand possession on the determination of a term. The situation of a lessor on the expiration of a term, and of a mortgagor who has covenanted that the mortgagee may enter upon a certain day, is precisely the same."
> 5 Bing. 653.

The case of George's Creek Company against Detmold was an action of ejectment brought by a mortgagor against a person other than the mortgagee. The mortgage contained a reservation permitting the mortgagor to retain possession of the mortgaged premises, until default in the covenants of the mortgage. The defendant set up an outstanding title in the mortgagee. The court held it was not available to him as a defense; that the reservation of the right of possession to the mortgagor, operated as a re-demise of the premises to him, and he was entitled to possession until there was a breach of the covenants. The authorities in this case were carefully reviewed, and the case was thoroughly argued. 1st Md. 225. The decisions of the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia reach the same result, though not always by the same course of reasoning.

The Landlord and Tenant Act was passed July 4th, 1864. The first case on the interpretation of this statute was that of Spalding v. Hall. The facts in this case were that the defendant was in possession of certain premises under a lease which was to expire June 30, 1864. On the 16th of June, the owner of the premises leased the same to the plaintiff for five years, commencing July 1st, 1864. No notice to quit was served on defendant, and he remained in possession after the expiration of his term. Plaintiff brought suit for possession under the Landlord and Tenant Act. The court held that the defendant Hall was a tenant from year to year, and entitled to six months' notice, which was sufficient of itself to dispose of the case, but the court went further, and held that the true intent and meaning of the legislature was to extend this remedy to all persons, who by act of the lessor, or by operation of law, were placed in the same relation to the tenant, as the original lessor, to wit, the grantees or assignees, devisees or heirs-at-law of the lessor. 6th D. C. 124. This case was decided November 21, 1864. Ten years later the case of Luchs vs. Jones was decided. This was an action brought by the plaintiff to recover the possession of the premises in controversy under the provisions of the act in question. The defendant had encumbered the premises in controversy by a deed of trust in the ordinary form to secure the payment of a debt therein described. Having made default in the payment of said debt, the property was sold by the trustee named in the deed of trust, and purchased by the plaintiff, to whom a conveyance had been made by the trustee. Plaintiff served the defendant with thirty days' notice to quit, on the theory that after the sale he was statutory tenant by sufferance. The court held that the action would lie. Justice MacArthur in deciding the case said:

> "I was of the opinion that the relation of landlord and tenant between the parties could not be inferred from these circumstances, so as to bring the case > within the statute upon which it was founded. A careful examination of the language used in the first section has satisfied me that in this respect, my construction of the act was erroneous. All of the judges who heard the case here, are of the same opinion. . . . The simple fact of possession where there is no contract, is a sufficient circumstance to create such tenancy, and if a man, therefore, holds possession of premises belonging to another, and there is no agreement between them, the relation of landlord and tenant arises by mere operation of the statute."

It does not appear whether there was a clause in the deed of trust under which the property was sold, providing for the retention of possession by the grantor therein, until default was made in the payment of the indebtedness. Inferentially it would seem that there was none. If there was, it was not considered by the court, nor referred to in any way in its opinion. Strictly speaking, this case is not an authority, for the reason that the court pronouncing it was without jurisdiction to hear the cause. Appeal was dismissed on that ground.

1st MacA. 346.

The case of Fiske vs. Bigelow was similar in its facts, and a like conclusion was reached by the court. The defendant in this case contended that there was a defective execution of the power of sale under the deed of trust, and that therefore the plaintiff had but an equitable interest in the property. The court denied the validity of the objection, and held that an equitable title was sufficient to support the action if the case was otherwise properly brought.

2d MacA. 431.

The case of Harris vs. Barber was brought to this court by writ of error to reverse a judgment quashing a writ of certiorari to a justice of the peace for the District of Columbia. It appears by plaintiff in error's petition for the writ of certiorari filed in the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, that he was in possession of a certain house and premises situate in the city of Washington in said District, as tenant under a certain lease not then expired, the terms of which are fully set out in said petition. That the leased premises were sold under a certain deed of trust prior in date to that of the lease. The purchaser was the defendant in error, Barber, who served him with a thirty days' notice to quit, and then brought an action for possession under the Landlord and Tenant Act. The justice before whom the suit was brought gave judgment for Barber. The petition averred that the proceedings before the justice were void for want of jurisdiction, because, inter alia, the relation of landlord and tenant did not exist between the said Barber and plaintiff in error, by convention, and that his proper remedy was by ejectment. The court below, on motion, quashed the writ of certiorari, and the case came here on error from that judgment. The case was heard on motion to dismiss or affirm. Justice Gray, for the Court said: "But upon the merits of the case, the judgment below is so clearly right, that the motion to affirm must be granted."

129 U. S. 368.

The case below is reported in 6 Mackey, 593.

In the case of the District of Columbia vs. Rapley, the court held that where a termor remained in possession of the leased premises after the expiration of the lease, with the consent of the landlord, he became, by operation of the Landlord and Tenant Act, a tenant by sufferance, and that such tenancy might be terminated by a thirty days' notice to quit.

6 Mackey, 534.

The case of Jennings vs. Webb was an action brought by one tenant in common with another who was in adverse possession of the property in question. There was no contractual relation between the parties. It was a simple act of ouster by one tenant, and claim of title in himself. The court held that the Landlord and Tenant Act did not apply to such a case—that the remedy therein provided was not intended to supersede the action of ejectment, 20 D. C. 321.

This same doctrine has been announced in the case of Fiske vs. Bigelow, supra.

The notice to quit was served prior to the sale. The defendant promised at the time of the sale, to obtain possession for the purchaser, to finish what it had commenced. The purchaser has not complied with the terms of sale. The trustee has not obtained possession of the property, and, until it has, cannot compel the purchaser to complete his purchase. The sale was conditioned upon the obtaining of possession by the trustee, and is abortive and goes for naught unless it is obtained. The trustee is in default and not the purchaser. The announcement that the trustee would obtain and deliver possession to the purchaser, may well have had a material influence upon the bidding. The trouble, expense and delay incident thereto were things of value, not to be held for naught. It is respectfully submitted that the judgment below ought to be affirmed.
